

Justices Reject Pleas

Washington (UPI) — The Supreme Court Friday turned down the pleas of seven money-short presidential candidates seeking to free $2.2 million in public funds for their campaigns.

The justices refused to recall or change their Jan. 30 opinion that the Federal Election Commission, which distributes the money, is improperly constituted.

Congress is bogged down in efforts to pass legislation that conforms with the decision, and no funds have been given out since March 22. The court already had granted two delays totaling 50 days in order to give Congress time to change the law.

In a brief order the court denied the candidates' motions to intervene as parties to the case, and to have the justices recall and modify their earlier judgment. The motion of the Democratic National Committee to file its views also was denied.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. noted that the original cases have been sent back to the appeals court and jurisdiction 'with respect to relief sought by new parties at this time is now with that court.'

The seven candidates told the court that the interruption of subsidy payments has severely cramped their campaign activities in the crucial Pennsylvania and Texas primaries. The order was sought by Republican Ronald Reagan and Democrats Morris Udall, Henry Jackson, Jimmy Carter, Fred Harris, Frank Church and George Wallace.

In Lincoln, Church said the decision 'doesn't surprise me. It is really 'up to the Congress' to bring an end to the delay in releasing funds, he told newsmen.

(It is unfair to change the rules in the middle of the campaign, he said, and 'I hope the Congress attends to this matter without further delay.'

The candidates were not parties to the original case but earlier Friday the U.S. Court of Appeals granted their motion to intervene, thus making it possible for the justices to act. Their practice is to ignore requests by persons who are not parties.

They gave the silent treatment to a similar request several weeks ago by the Democratic National Committee.

Congress has agreed on a compromise bill to reconstitute the FEC. It will be high on the agenda when the House and Senate return from their spring holiday next week.

But President Ford has said he doesn't like the bill because it goes beyond simply reconstituting the FEC and makes several major changes in the campaign law.

Taxpayer May Stay In Dark

Washington (UPI) — The Senate Intelligence Committee said Friday it will reconsider its decision to publish the intelligence community's multi-billion dollar budget following a last-minute appeal by President Ford.

A committee spokesman said the panel, nearing the end of its 15-month mandate, would assemble Monday to hear CIA Director George Bush and vote on whether to reverse its earlier decision to publish the figure.

The U.S. Intelligence community reportedly spends between $6 billion and $8 billion a year.

The group is composed of the CIA, FBI, Defense Intelligence Agency, the code-breaking National Security Agency, intelligence units of the military, services and intelligence groups within the State Department.

Treasury Department and the Energy Research and Development Administration.

Former CIA Director William E. Colby argued it would be a mistake to publish to budget figure for two reasons.

—Disclosing a single figure would encourage existing feeling in Congress for more complete details as each year went by.

—Analysis of a budget figures — either a single annual figure or a collection of figures if more eventually became available — would aid adversaries to decipher what intelligence activities the United States was emphasizing.

Bush knowledgeable sources said, could be expected to repeat similar arguments when he appears before the Senate panel.

Congress members who favor disclosure of the intelligence budget counter that the Russians already have an approximate idea of its size.

Only the U.S. taxpayer does not know, says Rep. Robert N. Giamo D-Conn. Giamo tried unsuccessfully to get the House to reveal the CIA's budget during consideration of the 1976 defense appropriation bill.

The Senate select committee voted 8-3 several weeks ago to disclose the figure in its final report, now due to be released Monday.

If on reconsideration, the panel decides not to publish the figure a blank space will appear in the lengthy report. If a decision to publish is reached, the figure will be inserted.

Jack Ford Fills In For Dad

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Jack Ford, the second eldest son of President Gerald Ford, played the surrogate candidate for his father in Lincoln Friday taking some swipes at Republican presidential challenger, Ronald Reagan.

The 24-year-old Ford spent an action-filled afternoon answering questions from 300 University of Nebraska students, stumping at the Tabitha Home and opening Ford campaign headquarters.

He charged that Reagan, a former California governor, has been making promises he cannot possibly keep and is misleading the press and public on the Panama Canal issue.

Ford said Reagan has promised voters in Texas that he will reinstate the income tax break given oil companies, known as the oil depletion allowance.

'Promise Not Possible'

He termed this promise by Reagan "an impossibility." If it were possible, he said, Texas Sens. Lloyd Bentsen and John Towers would have done it long ago.

Reagan, he charged, also has "duped" the press and others about U.S. rights in the Panama Canal.

When the Panama Canal Treaty was signed, the U.S. paid for certain rights in the Canal Zone, not sovereignty as the nation did for Alaska.

"Maintaining the status quo won't guarantee the canal isn't closed," he said. Every South American nation has said the U.S. must renegotiate the Canal Zone treaty, he said.

If Reagan's tough line is followed, Ford predicted, violence in the Canal Zone will be "a very real possibility."

'Ford Not Misleading'

Unlike Reagan, he said, his father's most important quality is that he doesn't give lip-service to issues or mislead the public.

President Ford, he said, "is a very humble man, even in politicking."

He said he appeared in Nebraska on behalf of his father because as President, his father is unable to take off for 10-15 days to campaign.

The younger Ford said he had gotten no briefings from his father on what he should say in his appearances. "I get his views from dinner table discussions."

The one area where he and his father disagree is marijuana. Jack said he favors decriminalization, while his father opposes that.

Asked why he felt former President Richard Nixon had chosen his father to replace Vice President Spiro Agnew, Ford said he thought Nixon did it to change his administration's image.

From a pragmatic viewpoint, Ford said it "was a calculated decision to stave off his own problem — impeachment. He was looking for his way out. He probably felt with the impeachment issue coming up he needed a guy on the team who knew the House of Representatives."

Ford didn't offer any speeches at any of his appearances. "There have been enough canned speeches in the Republican primary already," he said, but fielded questions from his audiences.

Relaxed and dressed in casual clothes, Ford explained he will be happy to see the campaign end.

Privacy Treasured

"Campaigning doesn't set well with my nature. I'm not the gregarious, back-slapping type. I treasure my privacy," he said.

Assuming his father is re-elected, Ford said he does not plan to live in the White House for four more years.

"I'll probably go back to Utah (where he went to college)," he said. "I'd like to get a job working outdoors in forestry. The problem is 99% of the jobs in forestry are with the federal government. Federal nepotism laws make it impossible for me to get one."

Asked about Democratic challengers, Ford quipped, "I'd sure like to see Milton Shapp nominated by the Democrats."

Bayard Senior Files Suit Over Graduation Ban

A high school senior sued the Bayard Board of Education Friday claiming she has been banned from graduation ceremonies and extracurricular activities because she is married.

Bayard School Supt. Lionel Wickard told Teresa Wimmer, 18, she could "compete" but could not participate in graduation ceremonies May 16 the suit contends.

Wimmer, an honor student, was married April 2.

The suit challenges the constitutionality of a 1953 school district rule banning married students, divorced students and unwed parents from participating in school activities.

According to the suit, the rule bans such students from attending Bayard High School unless "their attitudes and actions are consistent with the general welfare of the school."

The rule is "arbitrary, unreasonable and discriminatory," will cause "public humiliation" and violates constitutional rights the suit contends.

Wimmer is National Honor Society president, pep club secretary and band president at Bayard High School, the suit says. She participates in forensics, chorus, track, basketball and volleyball.

The University of Nebraska-Omaha and Kearney State College have offered her volleyball scholarships, the suit says.

U.S. District Judge Robert Van Pelt will hear arguments on a preliminary injunction May 3.

Decomposed Body Found At Palmyra

Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Palmyra — A homicide investigation was under way by the Otoe County sheriff's office and the State Patrol Friday in the discovery of a badly decomposed body buried in a garden at the Duane Wilken residence two miles west of Palmyra.

Otoe County Atty. Bill Davis said it was impossible to tell if the body was male or female, and that it had been taken to Omaha for an autopsy.

Officers cordoned off the area and sifted through the garden where the body was found. Davis said no weapons were found and the cause of death is not known.

Sharon Wilken was reported missing by her father Wednesday according to Davis, and an intensive investigation was begun. The body was found Friday evening.

Davis said no suspects were in custody late Friday. He refused to comment on whether Wilken had been questioned.

Otoe County Sheriff Russ Seals said his department has been checking into Mrs. Wilken's alleged disappearance since she was rumored missing two weeks ago.

Neighbors reported the couple had had a fight about two weeks ago.

Wilken was night foreman of the Journal-Star Printing Co. composing room in Lincoln until March 1 when he quit to manage Sherry's Cafe in Unadilla with his wife.

Dick Biers, who worked with Wilken at the Journal-Star, said he had a drink with the Wilkens at their business April 8 and nothing seemed unusual.

Wilken was not at his home Friday, nor were the couple's two sons, Don, about 12, and Dean, about 10.

Carter Would Set Goal Of 4.6% Unemployment

By United Press International
Jimmy Carter said Friday he would set a goal of reducing unemployment to 4.6% and balancing the federal budget by 1979 if he is elected president.

In Evansville, Ind., before flying to Georgia, President Ford was welcomed by a cheering crowd of 70,000 and said in apparent reference to Ronald Reagan, "I am sick and tired of those people who are downgrading this country."

With the nation's first primary in three weeks coming up Tuesday, Democrats Carter, Henry Jackson and Morris Udall campaigned hard in Pennsylvania, which will send 178 delegates to the national convention.

The primaries immediately after that — Texas on May 1 and Georgia, Indiana and Alabama on May 4 — were the main concern of Ford and Reagan.

Ford Answers Reagan
In appearances in Indianapolis and Evansville, Ind., Ford labeled "totally without foundation" suggestions by Reagan that he is ready to recognize North Vietnam. He also said, in response to a question about a Panama Canal treaty — one of Reagan's favorite anti-Ford themes — "Those who advocate breaking off negotiations are irresponsible."

Reagan, speaking in Birmingham, Ala., before flying to Indianapolis, said Ford is misleading the public about U.S. military strength by making "generalizations... that were somewhat inaccurate."

He said he has bought five minutes of time on CBS next Wednesday night, a month after his first 30-minute speech, to talk more about national defense and to ask supporters for money.

At a news conference, Reagan said, "Mr. Ford has simply declared in generalizations that we are the strongest nation on earth — no one's stronger than we are. I don't know what he's adding in there. Maybe he's adding in our ability in baseball and football and a few other things of that kind."

1979 Deadline Set
In Philadelphia, Carter released a position paper on the economy, in which he set 1979 as a target date for balancing the budget, but only if "full employment" — or a jobless rate of 4.6% overall and 3% for adults — is achieved first.

Other parts of his program include "selectively" applied wage and price controls not currently needed, more federal funding for on-the-job training by business and more presidential control over the Federal Reserve System.

Jackson, in a Pittsburgh television interview, said again that no Democrat who fails to win northern industrial states — meaning Carter — can expect to be the party's nominee. He also denied his is a "stalking horse" for Hubert Humphrey or anyone else.

Udall campaigned in central Pennsylvania. He told dairy farmers in Lancaster that dairy support prices "should be nothing less than 90% of parity." He said President Ford's veto of a bill to raise the current 80% of parity to 85% shows that "either Mr. Ford doesn't understand the needs of dairy farmers or he doesn't care."

B1 Has Goahead
In other developments:
—Ford was asked in Evansville if he wanted the controversial B1 bomber built. He replied,

"You're darn right, I do. If we're going to keep our strategic air capability strong in the future, we must build the B1 bomber and we're going to build it."

—Ford campaign director Stuart Spencer said in Austin the President has pulled even with Reagan in the May 1 Texas primary with Ford's biggest campaign effort yet to come.

—Carter said, in apparent reference to Humphrey, the Democrats would hurt their chances in November by nominating someone who didn't compete in the primaries.

A longtime Humphrey backer, millionaire businessman Robert Short, said in Minneapolis he and other friends of the Minnesota senator will formally announce formation of a Humphrey-Ford President Committee next week.

75,000 In Boston Protest Violence

Boston (UPI) — An estimated 75,000 silent blacks and whites, crowded sidewalk to sidewalk for a half mile, marched through Boston-Friday to solemnly protest violence in the city.

"I felt I had to be here to give my support against violence," Mrs. Patricia Overka said, clutching her 5-year-old son. "What's happening to this city, it's too much for words."

Bluejeaned teen-agers walked quietly beside well-dressed business executives from Boston Common to City Hall Plaza, led by Gov. Michael S. Dukakis and Mayor Kevin H. White.

The size of the predominantly white crowd, mostly from area offices and colleges, as estimated variously from 30,000 to upwards to 75,000 by Mayor White.

It's Too Late
"It's too late," said Mary Reilly, a college student who helps teach at a school in the troubled South Boston area. "They should have done this at the beginning."

The city, scene of sporadic violence over the past two years in relation to school desegregation under federal busing orders, has been jarred nightly this week with racial beatings. A bomb went off in a downtown courthouse Thursday, injuring 22 persons. There was no indication that incident was racially motivated. A group claiming to represent inmates at a state prison claimed responsibility in a note mailed to a weekly newspaper.

Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., and other members of the state's congressional delegation joined the marchers, who walked quietly under bright skies in warm spring weather.

March Boycotted
But members of the city's vocal antibusing groups boycotted the march, including City Council President Louise Day Hicks, as did a number of state representatives from South Boston, the focus of busing opposition for two years.

The plaza was the scene almost three weeks ago of an antibusing demonstration in which black attorney Theodore C. Landsmark was beaten by whites spurring recent racial conflict and is within sight of the Suffolk County Courthouse which was bombed Thursday, injuring 22 persons.

At the common, America's oldest park and starting point for the march, religious leaders, including Roman Catholic Archbishop Humberto Medeiros, Dr. John Coburn, bishop elect of the Episcopal Archdiocese of Boston; and Rabbi Roland B. Gittelsohn of Boston's Temple Israel, prayed for an end to violence.

Loan Company Gave Moore $25,000

Charleston, W. Va. (UPI) — The former comptroller of a now-bankrupt loan company testified in federal court Friday the company hoped to parlay a $25,000 political contribution to Republican Gov. Arch Moore into a state banking charter.

Moore, 53, and his former top aide, William Loy, 43, are accused of extorting $25,000 from Diversified Mountaineer Corp. in 1972 in exchange for a banking charter the company never received. The trial was recessed until Monday after Friday's testimony.

If convicted, Moore and Loy could receive maximum 20-year sentences and a $10,000 fine.

"The purpose of the contribution was to get a smile on the application or a sympathy on the application," said Roger

Baird, one-time chief financial officer for DMC.

Asked who was "to smile" on the banking charter, Baird replied, "The governor of the state of West Virginia."

Baird testified that in June 1972, he obtained $30,000 from DMC subsidiaries because former company president Theodore Price told him "Diversified was going to make a $25,000 contribution to Gov. Moore."

However, on cross-examination by defense attorney Stanley Preiser, Baird said everything he had heard about the money came from Price.

"You, as a loyal employee, would get any amount of money out for him he asked and he could do anything with it?," Preiser asked.

"Yes," replied Baird.

Baird said the first batch of money did not go to Moore.

He said $20,000 was returned to the company, $5,000 went for other political contributions and $5,000 went to Price for personal use.

Baird testified that in September 1972, he collected another $6,500 from DMC subsidiaries which was turned over to Price.

Baird said Price placed $5,000 in an envelope and kept $1,500 separate. "The $5,000 was for Gov. Moore," Baird added, "and, $1,500 was used, I believe, for other contributions."

The government contends Price delivered three envelopes to Moore's capitol office containing a total $25,000.

Strikes Affect Fields From Tires To Beer

By United Press International
Rubber workers, on strike across the nation for a third day Friday, toughened their stance in contract negotiations and drew the support of another large international union.

Signs of progress were reported in efforts to end a strike by doctors at three Los Angeles County hospitals, but nurses in Willimantic, Conn., paced picket lines outside Windham Community Memorial Hospital.

San Francisco Mayor George Moscone expressed dismay over the lack of progress toward ending a crippling 24-day-old strike by crafts unions.

Nationwide, there was little end in sight for the latest rash of labor disputes, affecting a variety of fields from tires and television to tracheotomies, transportation and beer.

Negotiators for the 70,000-member United Rubber Workers Union and the Big Four rubber manufacturers met under a stern warning from URW President Pete Bommarito.

"We will up our demands if they are going to cause our people to suffer from a lengthy strike," he said. A spokesman for Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. called Bommarito's statement a "bluff."

Contract talks still centered around Firestone, considered to be the pacesetter this year. Any agreement is expected to serve as a guideline for a new national master contract affecting all union members.

In Geneva, Switzerland, the International Federation of Chemical and General Workers Unions sent out a call for "support and solidarity action" for the rubber workers. The union urged members not to work excess overtime and to prevent transfer of products or equipment to the United States or its markets.

The Japanese rubber workers union already has threatened to strike in sympathy with the American union.

Closed-door meetings between striking doctors and Los Angeles County officials brought reports of "some progress" in efforts to end a strike that has crippled three big public hospitals. Officials said only 1,200 interns and resident doctors who walked out Wednesday were officially on strike, but hundreds of others did not perform any medical duties. The doctors walked out to protest a personnel shortage.

Economy Is Key Issue In Portuguese Election

By The New York Times

Lisbon — The key issue in the Portuguese elections Sunday is what to do about the economy.

Portugal is faced by a serious balance-of-payments problem and a drop in production, as well as inflation, unemployment and social agitation.

Each of the major political parties has presented a program for solving the economic crises, and is asking for a vote of confidence.

The Socialist platform calls for a "reconstruction" of the national economy, emphasizing the need to establish the rules of the game. They insist that the "errors and abuses" of the controversial agrarian reform program be corrected and that the public and private sectors be clearly defined. The Socialists stress their close ties with the rest of Europe and its promises of economic assistance and cooperation.

Communists Defenders
The Communists, on the other hand insist that they are the "defenders of the achievements of the revolution" — the labor gains, nationalizations, agrarian reform. They call for development of the public sector, advancement of the agrarian reform program and a wage-price policy that would favor workers.

The Popular Democrats demand profound changes in the economy, insisting that they are against both capitalism and Marxism, but favor a mixed economy. They want the agrarian reform laws revoked and new legislation worked out with the participation of the farmers. They defend "socially useful" private initiative and property.

The Social Democratic Center presents itself as a party of competent technicians. It is the only big party that is not part of the government coalition. The Centrists openly oppose the country's socialist trend and favor a free-market economy.

They are fervent defenders of private enterprise, calling for certain "denationalizations" and a suspension of the agrarian reform law.

The smaller parties offer a greater variety of platforms. The Maoist sister parties, the Marxist-Leninist Communist Party of Portugal and the Worker-Peasant Alliance, devote most of their programs to attacking the "social-fascists," as they call the orthodox Communists.

Bases Threatened
The third Maoist party, the Movement for the Reorganization of the Proletariat Party, equally denounces the "imperialists and the social-imperialists" — their name for the Communists — and calls for the dismantling of all bases used by foreign nations. This includes the American and French bases in the Azores.

The Popular Democratic Union, believed to be the only far-leftist party that has a chance of winning one or two seats in the National Assembly, demands that Portugal pull out of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, reject all United States loans and ally itself with the Third World.

The other far-leftist parties emphasize, in different degree, "peoples' power" and the politicizing of the armed forces. These are the radical socialist Popular Socialist Front, the Movement of the Socialist Left, the Trotskyist Internationalist Communist League and Revolutionary Workers Party.

The small rightist parties, the Christian Democrats and the Popular Monarchists, like the Social Democratic Center, have vigorously attacked the government's socialist moves as well as decolonization since the revolution of April 25, 1974.

The decolonization of Portuguese Africa is a prime election issue. Half a million colonial refugees are bitterly condemning the government parties for not defending their interests.

Barbara Walters To Debut On ABC In October

New York (UPI) — William Sheehan, president of ABC News, said Friday he expects Barbara Walters to make her debut as co-anchor of the network's "The Evening News" with Harry Reasoner in the first week of October.

Miss Walters announced her decision Thursday to leave NBC, where she is in her 12th year on the "Today" show, to accept a million dollar deal from ABC that also makes her the first woman to anchor a major network evening news program.

Sheehan denied industry reports that the network news show would go to 45 minutes when Miss Walters joins the

"The situation is vastly overblown," Sheehan said. "Expanding the evening news to 45 minutes is something we have talked about for a long time and something we would like to do. It has nothing to do with Barbara Walters."

Carter Would Set Goal Of 4.6% Unemployment

By United Press International
Jimmy Carter said Friday he would set a goal of reducing unemployment to 4.6% and balancing the federal budget by 1979 if he is elected president.

In Evansville, Ind., before flying to Georgia, President Ford was welcomed by a cheering crowd of 70,000 and said in apparent reference to Ronald Reagan, "I am sick and tired of those people who are downgrading this country."

With the nation's first primary in three weeks coming up Tuesday, Democrats Carter, Henry Jackson and Morris Udall campaigned hard in Pennsylvania, which will send 178 delegates to the national convention.

The primaries immediately after that — Texas on May 1 and Georgia, Indiana and Alabama on May 4 — were the main concern of Ford and Reagan.

Ford Answers Reagan
In appearances in Indianapolis and Evansville, Ind., Ford labeled "totally without foundation" suggestions by Reagan that he is ready to recognize North Vietnam. He also said, in response to a question about a Panama Canal treaty — one of Reagan's favorite anti-Ford themes — "Those who advocate breaking off negotiations are irresponsible."

Reagan, speaking in Birmingham, Ala., before flying to Indianapolis, said Ford is misleading the public about U.S. military strength by making "generalizations... that were somewhat inaccurate."

He said he has bought five minutes of time on CBS next Wednesday night, a month after his first 30-minute speech, to talk more about national defense and to ask supporters for money.

At a news conference, Reagan said: "Mr. Ford has simply declared in generalizations that we are the strongest nation on earth — no one's stronger than we are. I don't know what he's adding in there. Maybe he's adding in our ability in baseball and football and a few other things of that kind."

1979 Deadline Set
In Philadelphia, Carter released a position paper on the economy, in which he set 1979 as a target date for balancing the budget, but only if "full employment" — or a jobless rate of 4.6% overall and 3% for adults — is achieved first.

Other parts of his program include "selectively" applied wage and price controls not currently needed, more federal funding for on-the-job training by business and more presidential control over the Federal Reserve System.

Jackson, in a Pittsburgh television interview, said again that no Democrat who fails to win northern industrial states — meaning Carter — can expect to be the party's nominee. He also denied his is a "stalking horse" for Hubert Humphrey or anyone else.

Udall campaigned in central Pennsylvania. He told dairy farmers in Lancaster that dairy support prices "should be nothing less than 90% of parity." He said President Ford's veto of a bill to raise the current 80% of parity to 85% shows that "either Mr. Ford doesn't understand the needs of dairy farmers or he doesn't care."

B1 Has Goahead
In other developments:
—Ford was asked in Evansville if he wanted the controversial B1 bomber built. He replied,

"You're darn right, I do. If we're going to keep our strategic air capability strong in the future, we must build the B1 bomber and we're going to build it."

—Ford campaign director Stuart Spencer said in Austin the President has pulled even with Reagan in the May 1 Texas primary with Ford's biggest campaign effort yet to come.

—Carter said, in apparent reference to Humphrey, the Democrats would hurt their chances in November by nominating someone who didn't compete in the primaries.

A longtime Humphrey backer, millionaire businessman Robert Short, said in Minneapolis he and other friends of the Minnesota senator will formally announce formation of a Humphrey-Ford President Committee next week.

75,000 In Boston Protest Violence

Boston (UPI) — An estimated 75,000 silent blacks and whites, crowded sidewalk to sidewalk for a half mile, marched through Boston Friday to solemnly protest violence in the city.

"I felt I had to be here to give my support against violence," Mrs. Patricia Overka said, clutching her 5-year-old son. "What's happening to this city, it's too much for words."

Bluejeaned teen-agers walked quietly beside well-dressed business executives from Boston Common to City Hall Plaza, led by Gov. Michael S. Dukakis and Mayor Kevin H. White.

The size of the predominately white crowd, mostly from area offices and colleges, as estimated variously from 30,000 to upwards to 75,000 by Mayor White.

'It's Too Late'
"It's too late," said Mary Reilly, a college student who helps teach at a school in the troubled South Boston area. "They should have done this at the beginning."

The city, scene of sporadic violence over the past two years in relation to school desegregation under federal busing orders, has been jarred nightly this week with racial beatings. A bomb went off in a downtown courthouse Thursday, injuring 22 persons. There was no indication that incident was racially motivated. A group claiming to represent inmates at a state prison claimed responsibility in a note mailed to a weekly newspaper.

Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., and other members of the state's congressional delegation joined the marchers, who walked quietly under bright skies in warm spring weather.

March Boycotted
But members of the city's vocal antibusing groups boycotted the march, including City Council President Louise Day Hicks, as did a number of state representatives from South Boston, the focus of busing opposition for two years.

The plaza was the scene almost three weeks ago of an antibusing demonstration in which black attorney Theodore C. Landsmark was beaten by whites spurring recent racial conflict and is within sight of the Suffolk County Courthouse which was bombed Thursday, injuring 22 persons.

At the common, America's oldest park and starting point for the march, religious leaders, including Roman Catholic Archbishop Humberto Medeiros; Dr. John Coburn, bishop elect of the Episcopal Archdiocese of Boston; and Rabbi Roland B. Gittelsohn of Boston's Temple Israel, prayed for an end to violence.

Loan Company Gave Moore $25,000

Charleston, W. Va. (UPI) — The former comptroller of a now-bankrupt loan company testified in federal court Friday the company hoped to pay a $25,000 political contribution to Republican Gov. Arch Moore into a state banking charter.

Moore, 53, and his former top aide, William Loy, 43, are accused of extorting $25,000 from Diversified Mountaineer Corp. in 1972 in exchange for a banking charter the company never received. The trial was recessed until Monday after Friday's testimony.

If convicted, Moore and Loy could receive maximum 20-year sentences and a $10,000 fine.

"The purpose of the contribution was to get a smile on the application or a sympathy on the application," said Roger

Baird, one-time chief financial officer for DMC.

Asked who was "to smile" on the banking charter, Baird replied, "The governor of the state of West Virginia."

Baird testified that in June 1972, he obtained $30,000 from DMC subsidiaries because former company president Theodore Price told him "Diversified was going to make a $25,000 contribution to Gov. Moore."

He said $20,000 was returned to the company, $5,000 went for other political contributions and $5,000 went to Price for personal use.

Baird testified that in September 1972, he collected another $6,500 from DMC subsidiaries which was turned over to Price.

Baird said Price placed $5,000 in an envelope and kept $1,500 separate. "The $5,000 was for Gov. Moore," Baird added, "and, $1,500 was used, I believe, for other contributions."

The government contends Price delivered three envelopes to Moore's capitol office containing a total $25,000.

Plan Z Out, Double Z Next, Followed By Zzz

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Water rate plan "Z" is out and plan "Double Z" is in.

So says City Council Chairman Max Denney. He said Friday the council will meet Monday with Mayor Helen Bosalis to work out a compromise plan.

Denney said he thinks the council will scratch the rate schedules adopted earlier this week by only four of the seven lawmakers.

Denney's move is seen as an attempt to head off a possible mayoral veto which would throw the rates back into limbo once again. Five votes are needed to override a veto.

Mayor Bosalis hasn't indicated whether she would actually veto those rates or not. She said Friday she will hold off any action until after the Monday meeting.

Mrs. Bosalis said she is pleased the entire council and her staff will have a chance to work out a mutually acceptable rate plan.

She was referring to the private meeting four councilmen had a week ago to hash out the rate controversy. Out of that meeting, which included a member of the Chamber of Commerce but not three other council members, plan "Z" was hatched.

The council rejected the administration's two rate proposals in favor of the "Z" plan.

Denney dubbed the four lawmakers' proposal "Z" because he had hoped it would be the last rate structure the council ever discussed. He admits he's wrong. So, on Monday the officials will discuss "Double Z."

Information compiled by the water department staff indicates that plan "Z" would fall short of generating enough money to run the water system.

Figures show the rates would only produce $4.8 million, instead of the needed $5.2 million. The report also said the new rates would increase most homeowners' water bills, but decrease the larger industrial users' bills.

A story in Friday's Star which gave examples of various customers' water bills incorrectly stated the figures listed were monthly, instead of yearly, statements.

Tearful Reunion

Victoria Fyodorova Pouy, right, greets her mother Zoya Fyodorova, at New York's Kennedy Airport Friday evening. Zoya, whose daughter was born after a World War II romance with an American Naval officer, received her exit visa from the Soviet Union in time for the birth of her grandchild. She told reporters, "It feels like a fairy tale to be in the United States."

Russians Now Ready To Sell Fake Caviar

Moscow (UPI) — After years of experimentation, Soviet scientists say they are ready to launch artificial caviar onto the market. A spokeswoman for the trade minister said the product is ready for sale, but that no price had been set.

The fake caviar was developed at the Academy of Sciences Institute of Elementary Organic Formulas. Officials said a "caviar machine" at a Moscow refrigeration plant of the Ministry of Fisheries is geared to producing up to 400 pounds of the stuff every day.

But when a reporter asked to see the device he was told: "The machine is not suitable for viewing by foreign correspondents. Call back in a month." One official said the machine is "broken."

It was thus impossible to give an opinion on the taste of the product, which in the early stages was described as resembling "gelatinated cod liver oil."

A Soviet scientist who said he tried the artificial caviar some time ago described it as having "the consistency of potato paste. The taste was terrible."

But that was in the experimental stage. Officials said the developed product has been placed on trial sale at some fish shops in Moscow, and evoked a generally favorable response. They said it is difficult to tell the ersatz from the real caviar.

Embezzlement Of $22,700 From Brandeis Investigated

Lincoln police are investigating the embezzlement of more than $22,000 from a local department store.

Sam Marchese, general manager of Brandeis, told police Friday that some $22,700 had been discovered missing from the lawaway and cash-on-delivery departments at the downtown Lincoln store.

The embezzlement is thought to have covered a period of one year or more, police said.

Daley 'A Man,' Wayne Declares

Chicago (UPI) — Actor John Wayne Friday described Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley as "a man."

Daley called Wayne "a great American."

The two met in Daley's office at city hall, where Wayne was made an honorary citizen of Chicago.

"A city reflects the attitude of its people and the people reflect the attitude of its leadership," Wayne said.

"You people have been most lucky the last 20 years to have a man who is not afraid to speak his mind... I think he's a man."

Defense Calls 1st Witness In Mitzner Murder Trial

The man charged with taking $20,000 worth of coins and jewelry from the Mitzner Rare Coin Shop last spring borrowed $15 from a friend shortly after that alleged robbery, according to court testimony Friday.

Wesley Peery, charged with both robbery and the first degree murder of Mrs. Marianne Mitzner, borrowed some money from Joseph B. Cannito within two weeks after the June 6 murder, Cannito testified.

Cannito, who worked with Peery at Nebraska Wesleyan University, was the defense's first main witness.

Cannito, who was chief stationary engineer in the boiler room at the university, said Peery also worked part-time for him at nights. Cannito ran a painting contract business.

He said Peery borrowed money from him on several occasions, but that it probably didn't amount to more than $50. On questioning from defense attorney Stanley Cohen, Cannito said he owns a 1970 white Cadillac with a dark blue top. He said he had ridden in Peery's 1970 Cadillac which is red with a white top.

On the morning of the murder, Cannito said he remembers seeing Peery around 8 a.m., then again over the lunch hour. Cannito said he first heard about the murder when he went home for lunch.

He then rode his motorcycle to the Havelock area, where the coin shop is located, to see what was going on and stayed for about five minutes, Cannito testified.

Earlier Friday, the prosecution called its last and 46th witness, retired Nebraska State Patrol Capt. Vern Byler, a ballistics expert.

Byler testified that bullet fragments removed from the body of Mrs. Marianne Mitzner were .22 caliber.

The bullets could have been fired from the type of handgun owned by Mrs. Mary Blasek, Byler said. Mrs. Blasek is Peery's girl friend.

In previous testimony, Mrs. Blasek said she bought a .22 caliber revolver on May 23 because she was afraid of her ex-husband. She said the gun disappeared about a week later. The gun has not been found.

On cross-examination by defense attorneys, Byler admitted that the bullets could have been fired from a handgun, a rifle or a semi-automatic pistol.

Amadeus Quartet Plays Music By The Masters Masterfully

By EARL DYER
Star Staff Writer

It was a powerful evening of music Friday night for members of the Lincoln Friends of Chamber Music. The group presented the great Amadeus Quartet in concert at Sheldon Art Gallery.

There was great strength of composition — the intricate patterns of Mozart, the strident harshness of Bartok, and the majesty of Beethoven — matched by strength of performance.

The master quartet — Nobert Brainin and Siegmund Nissel, violinists, Peter Schidlöf, violist, and Martin Lovett, cellist — showed its maturity in the complexities and the lush, full harmonies of Mozart's Quartet No. 19 in C Major, the "Dissonant."

As always in quartet music at its best, the melodic lines followed by each instrument were clear and easy to follow without breaking apart the fabric of the total sound of the music.

But Bartok's Quartet No. 4 was the highlight of the evening for this reviewer.

The work is like a studio hung with the works of a great and versatile painter — the first movement's bold and slashing blocks of color, the second's delicate pigmentation, the sweetness of the lyric third, the fourth, a quiet study in textures and colors returning to the mood of the second, and finally the fifth, a partner to the first with its harsh brightness.

The Amadeus musicians played it to the hilt, full of vigor and odd effects, both harshness and softness. It was a performance in which all the harshness and dissonance and stridency were added together to make a work of great beauty.

There was none of the problem lesser groups sometimes have with Bartok, when performances seem to fall apart. This performance was one marvelous, coherent whole.

After Bartok, the power and majesty of Beethoven, more familiar in his patterns to most ears, was a fitting conclusion to the evening.

The Beethoven piece — like the rest of the concert — was performed masterfully, and the quartet showed particular strength in the soul-searching beauty of the slow second movement.

Altogether it was a great evening, with the strength given to great music by superlative performance — much that was sweet to hear but also much to challenge the heart and mind.

State College Board OKs Salary Study

Peru (AP) — The state college board Friday approved a study to compare teaching salaries at Nebraska state colleges with those at other schools.

The average salaries of professors, associate professors, assistant professors and instructors at other schools will be used in computing Nebraska state college salaries for the 1977-78 school year.

The board also approved the expenditure of $85,000 for a new parking lot at Kearney State College.

The board approved the appointment of Miss Judith Sims as nursing director at Kearney State. The nursing program will admit its first class in the fall of 1977.

Plan Z Out, Double Z Next, Followed By Zzz

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Water rate plan "Z" is out and pland "Double Z" is in.

So says City Council Chairman Max Denney. He said Friday the council will meet Monday with Mayor Helen Bosalis to work out a compromise plan.

Denney said he thinks the council will scratch the rate schedules adopted earlier this week by only four of the seven lawmakers.

Denney's move is seen as an attempt to head off a possible mayoral veto which would throw the rates back into limbo once again. Five votes are needed to override a veto.

Mayor Bosalis hasn't indicated whether she would actually veto those rates or not. She said Friday she will hold off any action until after the Monday meeting.

Mrs. Bosalis said she is pleased the entire council and her staff will have a chance to work out a mutually acceptable rate plan.

She was referring to the private meeting four councilmen had a week ago to hash out the rate controversy. Out of that meeting, which included a member of the Chamber of Commerce but not three other council members, plan "Z" was hatched.

The council rejected the administration's two rate proposals in favor of the "Z" plan.

Denney dubbed the four lawmakers' proposal "Z" because he had hoped it would be the last rate structure the council ever discussed. He admits he's wrong. So, on Monday the officials will discuss "Double Z."

Information compiled by the water department staff indicates that plan "Z" would fall short of generating enough money to run the water system.

Figures show the rates would only produce $4.8 million, instead of the needed $5.2 million.

The report also said the new rates would increase most homeowners' water bills, but decrease the larger industrial users' bills.

A story in Friday's Star which gave examples of various customers' water bills incorrectly stated the figures listed were monthly, instead of yearly, statements.

Tearful Reunion

Victoria Fyodorova Pouy, right, greets her mother Zoya Fyodorova, at New York's Kennedy Airport Friday evening. Zoya, whose daughter was born after a World War II romance with an American Naval officer, received her exit visa from the Soviet Union in time for the birth of her grandchild. She told reporters, "It feels like a fairy tale to be in the United States."

Russians Now Ready To Sell Fake Caviar

Moscow (UPI) — After years of experimentation, Soviet scientists say they are ready to launch artificial caviar onto the market.

A spokeswoman for the trade minister said the product is ready for sale, but that no price had been set.

The fake caviar was developed at the Academy of Sciences Institute of Elementary Organic Formulas. Officials said a "caviar machine" at a Moscow refrigeration plant of the Ministry of Fisheries is geared to producing up to 400 pounds of the stuff every day.

But when a reporter asked to see the device he was told: "The machine is not suitable for viewing by foreign correspondents. Call back in a month." One official said the machine is "broken."

It was thus impossible to give an opinion on the taste of the product, which in the early stages was described as resembling "gelatinated cod liver oil."

A Soviet scientist who said he tried the artificial caviar some time ago described it as having "the consistency of potato paste. The taste was terrible."

Quickly Going Broke

Seven presidential candidates are petitioning the U.S. Supreme Court for relief in the matter of federal campaign subsidies, and if no relief is forthcoming from the court it is hoped that the petition might at least do something to shame Congress into acting to clear up this gross inequity.

Congress passed the 1974 law limiting individual donations to candidates but providing for the disbursement of federal money to match lower contributions. The money was to be handed out by the Federal Election Commission (FEC).

Upon a finding some months ago by the Supreme Court that the FEC was illegally structured, some of its powers, among them, to disburse money, were withdrawn pending corrective legislation.

The matter now sits in Congress where members of the majority party are jockeying for a major revision of the entire law, not content to undertake only the minor corrective surgery needed to get the FEC back in business now and debate more comprehensive revision after the coming election. It is not clear, either, whether President Ford would sign any new legislation if and when it comes out of Congress, although it was the President who suggested following the court's guidelines now and arguing far-reaching changes later.

Meanwhile, some of the active candidates for president, including Ronald Reagan and most of the Democrats, are quickly going broke, their ability to raise private money restricted by the law and their flow of federal matching funds stopped up by the court.

It is an unconscionable situation wherein Congress at least has taken on the appearance of playing favorites, and the President may be in the game, too. Delay in restoring power to the FEC can only benefit candidate Ford and non-candidate Hubert Humphrey, who at present doesn't have to spend money to gain a nomination which may come his way through the back door, and whose supporters obviously won't be grief-stricken if the candidacies of those in the active pack die of fiscal malnutrition.

Whatever the motivation, congressional finagling may end up denying the voters any real voice in determining the party nominees for the November election.

Sunset Laws In Style

Gov. Dick Lamm of Colorado has signed into law a measure which would force state regulatory agencies and programs out of business unless they meet with legislative approval after a review each six years. The government pruning bill is called a "Sunset" Law. Colorado's version was suggested by that state's chapter of Common Cause and other states and the federal government are examining the concept.

During the last session of the Nebraska Unicameral, State Sens. John DeCamp of Neligh and Loran Schmit of Bellwood were talking about a more severe version of the Sunset Law. They suggested all state agencies but the constitutional offices be subject to possible termination or merger after a four-year review period. The proposal apparently was a little too imprudent for legislative appetites.

But measures to trim away excess government baggage and amputate some of the ensnaring regulatory arms seem to be the wave of the future, the product of the general disenchantment with the government the people themselves have built.

Wariness about revue-and-termination-or-continuance laws is counseled.

One can envision legislators, caught in a particular political situation, hacking away at the structure of government with unreasoned zeal.

We wonder if such proposals as the Sunset Law are mostly form and little substance, enacted for show more than anything else?

The avenues are open now for keeping government uncomplicated, if only the avenues would be used. What's wrong, for example, with a little housekeeping at budget time, if that's what is called for. There is something paradoxical about duplicating the authority to cut back the reach of government.

APRIL

That Time Again

WASHINGTON — The oldest established permanent floating dates on the American calendar are for starting and ending Daylight Saving Time. This year — and possibly for this year only — the starting date is Sunday, April 25. Dutiful citizens will then move their clocks forward one hour. Technically, one o'clock in the morning instantly becomes two o'clock. That lost hour will be returned sometime in the fall. "Sometime" cannot be determined right now because Congress is again revising the daylight saving season — for the third time since 1972.

Because of the energy crisis that year, Congress approved a two-year trial of year-round daylight saving time in an effort to reduce the use of electricity. But a lot of people were unhappy about sending their children to school in the dark during the winter months. Moreover, the secretary of transportation reported in mid-year 1974 that the energy savings were insignificant. Congress responded by ending Daylight Time on Oct. 27 and reinstating it the following Feb. 23. By now it is the year 1975.

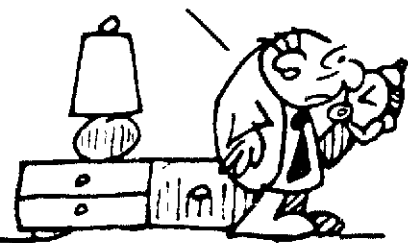

That fall, scheduling reverted to dates set forth by the Uniform Time Act of 1966. The act — remember? — was an attempt to bring a lot of state rules into national conformity. It imposed a six-month observance of Daylight Saving Time between the last Sunday in April and the last Sunday in October. And that is where we are now. Except, of course, another change is in the making. The Senate on Feb. 25 passed a bill to lengthen the season slightly, from the second Sunday in March to the second Sunday in October. The House has not acted on the bill, leaving in doubt when we'll be able to reclaim the hour of sleep we're due to lose on April 25.

WASHINGTON — Maybe Hubert H. Humphrey can win the Democratic presidential nomination by following his present strategy but if so, it is hard to see how he could unify the Democratic Party and go on to defeat President Ford — if he is the Republican nominee — in the fall campaign.

The Humphrey phenomenon began with the notion that no single leader could emerge from the big Democratic field, under new Democratic rules, so that a divided, deadlocked convention would need to nominate a respected and experienced party elder as a choice acceptable to all factions.

"As the campaign has developed, however, two things have gone wrong with that 'scenario.' First, former Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia, although he has by no means run away from the field, has emerged as enough of a front-runner so that a discernible 'Stop Carter' movement has been formed.

The other development is that Humphrey, in addition to being the obvious beneficiary of the "Stop Carter" movement, is in fact playing the major role in it. In so doing, he is not only helping to "stop" Carter, if that can be done; he seems to be undercutting the candidacies of Sen. Henry Jackson and Rep. Morris Udall, as well.

Just recently, as reported by R. W. Apple of The New York Times, Humphrey took his big name and his party connections to Indiana and packed the house for a Democratic Party fundraiser. That was bound to make the lesser-known Jackson look bad — and it did when he came to Indianapolis the next night and drew only a modest audience. Earlier, in New York, where Jackson had pitched his major effort, he had to intervene personally with Humphrey to keep the eager "non-candidate" from making a major political appearance in Buffalo — which also could have hurt Jackson in an area where he needed help instead.

In Wisconsin, where Udall was fighting to stay alive in this campaign, Humphrey was widely reported to have urged Humphrey backers to help Udall as part of the "Stop Carter" strategy. Udall played along, and even suggested to those who preferred Humphrey that their best bet was a Udall vote. Whatever either man intended, the net effect of this collusion was to make Udall look like a Humphrey stalking horse rather than a bonafide candidate in his own right.

Now, in Pennsylvania, Jackson's candidacy is undergoing the same process of erosion from underneath. The labor union leaders of that state, heavily committed to Jackson, openly admit — with no known protest from Humphrey — that they actually prefer H. H. H., and are supporting Jackson only as a "Stop Carter" expedient. All this may cause some Democrats to remember the complaints by backers of Sen. Edmund S. Muskie that Humphrey never really gave their man the clear shot that he had promised him in 1972.

The fact is that Humphrey

WASHINGTON — If making mistakes is part of the learning process, then we can assume that the press is still learning how to cover its specialty — national politics. For now, two months after the first primary and with 20-odd more to go, it is clear that mistakes have been made.

There was the over-coverage of the February happening in New Hampshire, the effect of which we'll get to in a moment.

There was the series of Wednesday morning "surprise stories." Those are the stories political reporters use to get off the book when their speculations turn sour. Examples were Ronald Reagan's "upset victory" in North Carolina and Jimmy Carter's "stunning defeat" of George Wallace in the same state. What was upset was the media prognosis, and the prognosticators were the ones stumped.

And then there was the embarrassing mix-up of the Wisconsin primary result by two networks and some newspapers. The premature — and wrong — announcement of victory for Morris Udall sent picture editors to their files for the old shot of a grinning Harry Truman displaying the Chicago Tribune headline, "Dewey Defeats Truman." All good clean fun, and no damage done.

On the plus side, it can be said — at least it is being said — that the system is working. The Democratic field has been narrowed in a fairly rational manner, although there is room for suspicion that media coverage played a larger part in that narrowing than it should have.

And the dull and harmless course of the Ford-Reagan duel with rubber-stamped words has not been impeded.

We know more about the candidates than when we started, and that is a benefit that should not be understated. The job of the press, after all, is not to give election results a couple of hours before the vote count is completed. It is to provide the information the public needs to make the decisions it will have to live with.

The trend seems to be away from the horse-race coverage of the early primaries and toward concentration on the candidates themselves, which is all to the good.

Unquestionably there has been overkill in the coverage of Jimmy Carter's juggling of "ethnic purity." But overkill or not, a lot of useful information was conveyed, and not just about Carter's ability to handle a hot potato. The reactions of other candidates — Ford with his "ethnic treasure," for example, and Henry Jackson with his show of shock and indignation — were revealing, too.

Getting back to New Hampshire, two Catholic University of America political scientists have completed a study of the media firestorm there. Their findings should contribute to the learning process I mentioned. Michael J. Robinson, assistant professor of political science, and Karen McPherson, a graduate assistant, analyzed network evening news shows for the three months ending three days after the New Hampshire primary. They found that of the 185 delegate selection stories relating directly to the presidential race, more than half were devoted solely or mostly to New Hampshire. This despite the fact that the state sends well under one per cent of the delegates to the nominating conventions.

They also found that although the networks conceded that they had overcovered the 1972 primary, 1976 coverage was 29% greater.

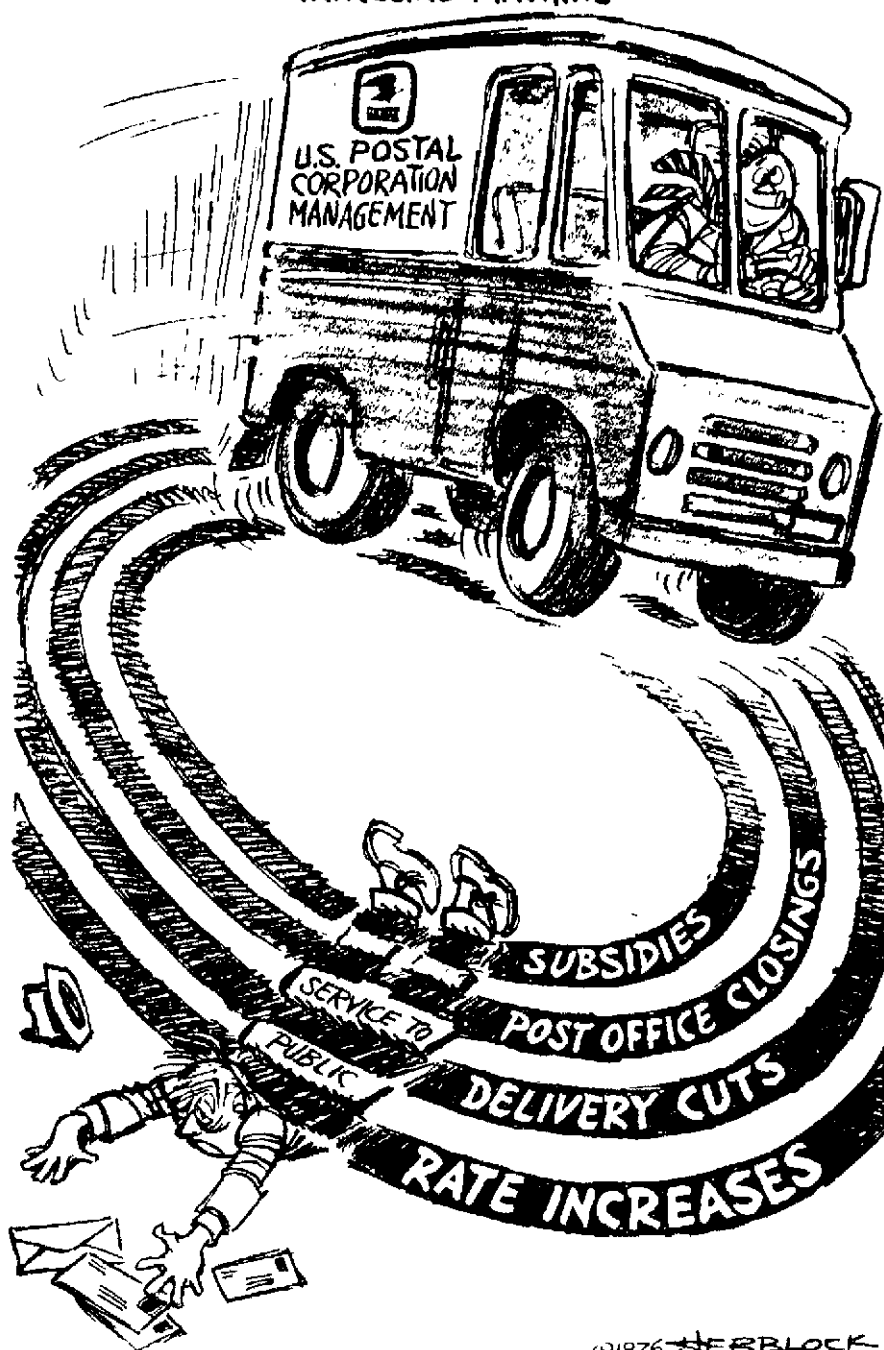

The study related television coverage to newspaper coverage by checking the Washington Post, the New York Times and the Columbus (Ohio) Dispatch. The result New Hampshire saturation was considerably heavier on TV than in print. The three newspapers devoted 35.2% of delegate selection stories to New Hampshire, contrasted with 54% for the networks. And what was the effect of this obsession with New Hampshire? The study showed that people who rely on television for campaign news were much more likely to over-estimate the importance of the New Hampshire primary in terms of delegates than were people who rely on newspapers.

Perhaps it doesn't matter that a lot of citizens think New Hampshire is more important in the political scheme of things than it really is. But the results of the survey raise another question, one that cannot be answered by studies or polls: What effect did the over-coverage of New Hampshire have on the subsequent primaries and on the present alignment of the candidates?

WASHINGTON — The price of a first-class stamp has more than doubled in four years. Only a few months ago, the price jumped again from 10 to 13 cents. Postal authorities predict that in another five years a stamp will cost 23 cents.

Other postal charges are also going up, up, up. The cost of special delivery shot up this week from 60 to 80 cents. The fee for registering mail climbed from 95 cents to $1.25. And money order fees rose from 25 to 30 cents.

Yet as mail rates have gone up, the service has gone down. Mail users might be excused for wondering, therefore, where their stamp money is going. Here are a few specifics:

—The postal plight hasn't restrained the top officials from raising their own salaries. Postmaster General Benjamin Franklin Ballar, for example, upped his salary from $60,000 to $63,000 at the same time that he was explaining how necessary it was to increase the price of stamps another three cents. In the Western states region alone, more than three dozen postal officials wangled promotions for themselves.

—As a Bicentennial project, the Postal Service shelled out $120,000 for two 28-foot motor vans, which were supposed to be outfitted as traveling exhibits. The postal authorities unhappily concluded, however, that the mail service was in such bad grace that it wouldn't be a good time for postal displays. As a result, the Bicentennial vans have been quietly set aside for use as "emergency" post offices in areas hit by natural disasters.

—Postal planners have signed a lease on 21 acres of vacant land near New York's Kennedy airport. It's costing the taxpayers $25,000 a month to hold the property, which is supposed to be used for the construction of a new airmail facility. But meanwhile, the top postal brass are seriously considering abolishing airmail letters.

Fair Water Charges

Since I, too, was disturbed over Water plan 'Z', I made several telephone calls to some of those involved. Most of them were sincere and willing to listen to my opinion and we had a very pleasant several minutes with each of them. However, the one that I most expected to be the one sympathetic with a citizen's views was most biased, opinionated and while never for a moment able to produce convincing facts tried to out-shout me while attempting to convince me that you and I as small users of water in Lincoln were being subsidized by a couple of large water-users who sell their products mainly away from Lincoln, Nebraska.

This "gentleman" does not hold with the fact that we citizens of Lincoln who own our homes here are the owners and main stockholders in the Lincoln Water System. We built it and we financed it and we found the good water source in the Platte River Valley and caused the huge water-carrying arteries to fill and flow to Lincoln. I am being told that the needed large investment in an improved water plant is due only to the fact that we small users usually go hog-wild in the critical summer months and put such a demand on the system that we are to blame. It therefore costs much more to supply our varying needs than that cost to supply the biggest user constantly.

The purpose of the water use — the primary reason for a city water system is not taken into account — potable water for drinking, keeping our yards and homes neat and clean and lawns, trees and gardens growing as well as our children, and our own sanitary needs are evidently secondary to using water to cool equipment and then run it down the creek.

Now, I ask, does Goodyear or American Stores rate first consideration? They can absorb and pass on to the ultimate consumer of their products far away from Lincoln their cost of water, whatever its price. Or they could be given permission to place wells down into the cool saline waters beneath Lincoln which is worthless to drink or water growing things and take a lot of the peak load off of our potable supply during these summer peaks. Let them solve their summer need problem at their expense or pay an equal gallon-for-gallon price along with us. Any investment we make in a larger plant isn't going to cost us money in the long-run because Lincoln is growing and will keep on growing and the larger plant we build now will cost us less now than in years to come so we will never be throwing our money away.

The threat that these companies will leave Lincoln is absurd since the cost of water is only a secondary issue which they raise to help them make money. They are located here because good Lincolmites deliver a darn good day's, week's or month's work for the wages paid and Lincoln has an abundance of other good things going for us that make this a desirable place for them to locate. Do not think for one minute that they will stay here when the time comes even if the water were free to them and delivered at no cost to them. That is a false argument.

The fair thing to do since no factual figures have been presented is for a charge to be made to everyone at the same price per 100 or 1,000 gallons for a period of time, let us say two years. Then after we can collect true figures on costs and contingencies, begin to adjust unfair or excessive rates.

Quickly Going Broke

Seven presidential candidates are petitioning the U.S. Supreme Court for relief in the matter of federal campaign subsidies, and if no relief is forthcoming from the court it is hoped that the petition might at least do something to shame Congress into acting to clear up this gross inequity.

Congress passed the 1974 law limiting individual donations to candidates but providing for the disbursement of federal money to match lower contributions. The money was to be handed out by the Federal Election Commission (FEC).

Upon a finding some months ago by the Supreme Court that the FEC was illegally structured, some of its powers, among them, to disburse money, were withdrawn pending corrective legislation.

The matter now sits in Congress where members of the majority party are jockeying for a major revision of the entire law, not content to undertake only the minor corrective surgery needed to get the FEC back in business now and debate more comprehensive revision after the coming election. It is not clear, either, whether President Ford would sign any new legislation if and when it comes out of Congress, although it was the President who suggested following the court's guidelines now and arguing far-reaching changes later.

Meanwhile, some of the active candidates for president, including Ronald Reagan and most of the Democrats, are quickly going broke, their ability to raise private money restricted by the law and their flow of federal matching funds stopped up by the court.

It is an unconscionable situation wherein Congress at least has taken on the appearance of playing favorites, and the President may be in the game, too. Delay in restoring power to the FEC can only benefit candidate Ford and non-candidate Hubert Humphrey, who at present doesn't have to spend money to gain a nomination which may come his way through the back door, and whose supporters obviously won't be grief-stricken if the candidacies of those in the active pack die of fiscal malnutrition.

Whatever the motivation, congressional finagling may end up denying the voters any real voice in determining the party nominees for the November election.

Sunset Laws In Style

Gov. Dick Lamm of Colorado has signed into law a measure which would force state regulatory agencies and programs out of business unless they meet with legislative approval after a review each six years. The government pruning bill is called a "Sunset" Law. Colorado's version was suggested by that state's chapter of Common Cause and other states and the federal government are examining the concept.

During the last session of the Nebraska Unicameral, State Sens. John DeCamp of Neligh and Loran Schmit of Bellwood were talking about a more severe version of the Sunset Law. They suggested all state agencies but the constitutional offices be subject to possible termination or merger after a four-year review period. The proposal apparently was a little too imprudent for legislative appetites.

But measures to trim away excess government baggage and amputate some of the ensnaring regulatory arms seem to be the wave of the future, the product of the general disenchantment with the government the people themselves have built.

Wariness about revue-and-termination-or-continuance laws is counseled.

One can envision legislators, caught in a particular political situation, hacking away at the structure of government with unreasoned zeal.

We wonder if such proposals as the Sunset Law are mostly form and little substance, enacted for show more than anything else?

The avenues are open now for keeping government uncomplicated, if only the avenues would be used. What's wrong, for example, with a little housekeeping at budget time, if that's what is called for. There is something paradoxical about duplicating the authority to cut back the reach of government.

That Time Again

WASHINGTON — The oldest established permanent floating dates on the American calendar are for starting and ending Daylight Saving Time. This year — and possibly for this year only — the starting date is Sunday, April 25. Dutiful citizens will then move their clocks forward one hour. Technically, one o'clock in the morning instantly becomes two o'clock. That lost hour will be returned sometime in the fall. "Sometime" cannot be determined right now because Congress is again revising the daylight saving season — for the third time since 1973.

Because of the energy crisis that year, Congress approved a two-year trial of year-round daylight saving time in an effort to reduce the use of electricity. But a lot of people were unhappy about sending their children to school in the dark during the winter months. Moreover, the secretary of transportation reported in mid-year 1974 that the energy savings were insignificant. Congress responded by ending Daylight Time on Oct. 27 and reinstating it the following Feb. 23. By now it is the year 1975.

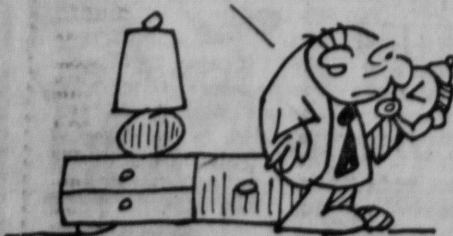

That fall, scheduling reverted to dates set forth by the Uniform Time Act of 1966. The act — remember? — was an attempt to bring a lot of state rules into national conformity. Bicentennial Wagon Train Trek Seasoning Greenhorns

By TOM COOK
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Osceola — The creaking wagons, lathered horses and weather hardened faces are living history of the winning of the West.

The sod of Nebraska is once again being cut by hoofs as a wagon train wends its way across the prairie, only this time the horses face the sunrise when the day's journey begins.

The wagon train, which is paralleling the Oregon Trail, is one of five in the Bicentennial Wagon Train Pilgrimage to Pennsylvania — each follow a different pioneer trail.

Wagonmaster Rollie Hebel of Ennis, Mont., said he had a few greenhorns on the train, which includes nine official wagons and about 50 riders, when it started out from Wyoming this spring after wintering there.

Wagonmaster Went Home

"I got hired as a driver myself when we started out a year ago, but the wagonmaster had to go home, and they put me in charge five days out of Fort Laramie," Hebel said.

The train started out averaging about 20 miles a day, but Hebel said the average in Nebraska has been 28-35.

"Some of the drivers were a little green at the start," the Montana rancher said. "But they're getting an education."

The train followed some parts of the

Flu Attack Suffered

There have been no serious injuries on the trek and instead of the more historic typhoid or smallpox, the trains' only sickness was a mild attack of flu.

Zavan Green, 81, of Firth, Idaho, is the oldest member of the train and says things have changed a lot since he went the other way as a boy of 16.

Green made the trip from Oklahoma to Idaho with three wagons — one driven by his parents, one by his brother-in-law and the last by himself.

"The horses weren't nearly as good as these are, but I thought a lot more of them because they was my first team, and I was real proud," he said.

Changing wagon wheels along the trail and telling yarns about the old days make Green a valuable and popular traveler.

'Went Up Platte'

"You went by a cornfield once in awhile, but the rest was all grass," he recalls. "We went right up the Platte. There was a track for the wagon and the horses, but the grass came right up to the wagon tongue."

Green said he's wanted to make the return trip for a long time and offered advice to those who say they would like to do something like that — if only.

"You can't wait around for things to be just right. If you get an opportunity to do something you want to, just drop everything and do it."

Some members of the train gave up their jobs or left their ranching operations behind to make the trek.

"We've talked to them some to help where we could," Green said. "Heck, I know a lot more about horses than I do about airplanes."

Travelers Take Pride

Besides reliving history for the bicentennial, Green said people on the train are taking pride in the journey itself.

"We were on the trail three days and an old rancher had us in for dinner and told us we were crazy and would never make it."

"We're going to show them all that it can still be done."

The wagons circled up Friday night in Osceola and the group of entertainers accompanying the train put on their heritage show.

Several more stops are planned in Nebraska before the train reaches the Missouri River where the wagons will be loaded on barges for the last leg of the journey to Pennsylvania.

All the wagon trains will arrive in Valley Forge July 4th during a national governors conference to be held there.

The remaining stops in Nebraska include Saturday and Sunday in Columbus, Schuyler, April 26; North Bend, April 27 and 28; Fremont, April 29; Fort Calhoun, April 30; Omaha, May 1, and Nebraska City May 2.

Indians Following Wagon Train Seek Understanding, Help In Washington

By J. L. SCHMIDT
Star Staff Writer

The caravan following the Trail of Self Determination may well be the last group of American Indians to take their case to Washington D.C., according to Sid Mills, executive director of the Survival of American Indians Association.

Mills and a small following have been trailing the Bicentennial Wagon Train Pilgrimage to Philadelphia since the wagons stopped near Ft. Laramie, Wyoming. They broke off from that group to spend about four days in Lincoln at Indian Expo '76 at the State Fairgrounds.

The trail closely parallels that of the Trail of Broken Treaties, the last mass caravan of Indians to descend on the nation's capital in October 1972.

Mills, a participant in that march, said the group, under the sponsorship of the American Indian Movement, presented a list of 20 demands to the government.

"They said they'd act within 60 days, and it's been almost four years, and nothing has been done," Mills said.

Indian people are getting tired of asking the white bureaucracy to help, Mills said, which is the reason for the talk about this caravan will be the last. Instead, they plan to ask Americans to write to their representatives in Washington and ask them to do something about the plight of the Indians.

The survival group began in 1964, Mills said, to deal specifically with the Medicine Creek Treaty of 1854 which, among other things, gave Indians certain fishing rights in the State of Washington. They expanded their scope to cope with the bicentennial, Mills explained.

"This bicentennial is not a celebration of the principles and dignity of this country," Mills said.

"Any country which would let an agency like the Bureau of Indian Affairs govern a part of its people can't do so with dignity," he added.

He noted that the country has no bureau of anybody else's affairs, they've made no other race of people wards of the country.

This theme will be developed at the Sovereign Native Women's Conference next month at Haskell Institute near Lawrence, Kan., Mills said.

"At that time we hope to develop a blueprint for a new national Indian government, based on the woman and the family," he added.

Literature being distributed by the survival group includes a brochure about the conference which quotes an old Cheyenne proverb, "A nation is not conquered until the hearts of its women are on the ground. Then it is done, no matter how brave its warriors nor how strong its weapons."

Indian people are still asking themselves, "Where is the Justice," Mills said. The

Youth-in-Action Teenage Voice Eases Drug Users' Crises

When the Drug Crisis Line rings, Karl Schlitt might be the one who answers.

A junior at Lincoln High School, Karl is the youngest volunteer to man the phones for the crisis line.

But he doesn't think age should be a factor. "If I can do it effectively at 17, that's all that's important."

Karl must be doing something right. He was made a shift supervisor soon after he began. And then he was trusted with confidential files so he could compile statistics on the calls received.

Like the other volunteers, Karl has had several training sessions. He also has some special insights into the problems of his callers.

"I've been on the other end of it," he says. "I've got a lot better understanding of the situation and the underlying problems."

But Karl stresses that more emphasis is placed on volunteers caring for other people than "having been there." A lot is instinct, he adds.

While he can tone down his voice, there's not much he can do about his rising blood pressure. "I get really scared and that isn't too cool to show when you're talking with someone who's really scared anyway."

Karl tries not to take the problems of his callers home with him, but not knowing what happens to people leaves him with "a strange feeling." Most of the calls are anonymous.

When he handles a call well, there's a definite sense of satisfaction. "I'm actually doing something for the community. I'm helping someone."

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Schlitt, 2600 C, Karl spends 16 hours each weekend waiting for the phone to ring in the small crisis line office at the back of the Open Door Health Center, 2545 R. Some nights the phone never rings and Karl finds himself sitting on the edge of his chair, tense.

What began as a casual volunteer effort has turned into a real involvement for Karl. He spends over 80 hours a month with the crisis line, either on phone duty or working with statistics. His increased commitment has earned him some school credits through the Educational Participation in the Community program.

Karl says not many of his schoolmates know he works with the crisis line. He doesn't try to push an anti-drug campaign with them.

"I don't try to be the heavy and say 'don't take that.' They wouldn't listen to me and I'd just lose my credibility. But I tell them when they've got bad stuff or what it'll do to them."

Hinky Dinky To Close Store In Plattsmouth

Omaha (AP) — Hinky Dinky President Charles Monasee says the grocery chain will close its Plattsmouth store May 1.

The chain has had a store in Plattsmouth for 40 years, and has been at its present location 22.

The 10,000-square-foot store is too small to operate profitably in view of high labor and fringe benefit costs, Monasee said. He said Hinky Dinky today is geared for mass distribution of products from large stores.

The Plattsmouth store has 9 full-time and 13 part-time employees and a company spokesman said the firm will attempt to find jobs for those workers in other stores.

The nearest remaining Hinky Dinky stores are in Bellevue, 11 miles north of Plattsmouth, and in Nebraska City, 26 miles to the south, Monasee said.

Medicine Creek Treaty was before the Supreme Court twice, and upheld both times, the last time in 1968, he said.

"The last four presidents have asked for the recognition of the self determination of the Indian people, but all the government can do is to make more promises, and pass more legislation," he added.

It's almost impossible to get salmon now, he noted, "cause there are so many policemen up there now. The Indian people are actually getting less fish now than they did in the past, but nobody seems to want to talk about that."

"Indians lead every rotten statistic there is in this country. We have the highest birth rate, but the most infant mortality. We have 75% unemployment ... nobody could survive on what we've been asked to live with," he said.

"We're talking about saving lives, not selling arts and crafts," Mills said of the Indian Expo being held in the coliseum across

Sutherland Site Of Second Power Plant

Columbus (AP) — The Nebraska Public Power District board of directors has voted to build a second, coal-fired power unit at the site of the Gerald Gentleman Power Station which is now under construction south of Sutherland.

Meeting here Thursday, the board voted 9-2, going along with recommendations from NPPD management and staff.

At the outset, 30 possible sites for the new plant were surveyed. That list was narrowed down to three; the Gentleman site, a site near Cornstock and one near the Canady Steam Plant south of Lexington.

However, the board decided on the Gentleman site because the new plant would have the least impact on the environment if built there.

The new unit, which will have a 650-megawatt capacity, is expected to be in commercial operation by 1981. However, no timetable for the beginning of construction has been set.

The unit now under construction at the Gentleman site is expected to be on line by May 1978.

"WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE?"

Psalms 2 and Acts 4:25

God raised up Moses to deliver His people out of the slavery and oppression of the Egyptians. When Moses had finished his work and led the people to the borders of the Promised Land he turned his job and authority over to Joshua. God miraculously opened up the waters of the River Jordan and the people crossed over into the Promised Land. Nearby the walled city of Jericho stood in the way of their progress. One day as Joshua stood surveying the situation, suddenly he became aware of a man standing nearby with his sword drawn in his hand. Joshua went to him and asked if he was a friend, or a foe. The reply was: "Nay; but as captain of the host of The Lord am I now come." Joshua 5:14.

(We are called upon to meditate upon God's Word: This man might have been the Arch Angel Michael: "And there was war in heaven: Michael and his Angels fought against the dragon — the great dragon — that old serpent called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world..." Rev. 12:7, etc. Or, this man who appeared to Joshua might have been none other than Christ Himself: 1st Corinthians 10:4, etc., tells us Christ was the "Spiritual Rock" with Israel, and He it was who sustained them, and it was Christ whom they tempted by their fornication, and murmuring at the Providences of God, and for which cause God destroyed and killed many thousands of them — and these things are written for our admonition!)

Joshua fell on his face to the earth, and did worship, and said: "WHAT SAITH MY LORD UNTO HIS SERVANT?" The first thing the Captain of The Lord's Host told Joshua was to loose his shoe from his feet, for the ground on which he was, was holy — this same message Moses got when God appeared to him in the Burning Bush! Next the Captain of God's Host gave Joshua instructions how to capture and destroy Jericho. It would require seven days to carry out God's plan. When these orders were obeyed God would throw down the walls of the city! (You unbelievers and those who count these things myths, did you never hear of the havoc wrought by earthquakes, and do you not know that earthquakes never occur without orders of permission from God's Throne? Why don't you act honest enough to get out of a Church founded and developed on the grounds that the entire Bible is the infallible Word of God?) When the walls were thrown down then they were to go up and utterly destroy the city and all therein with sword and fire, with two exceptions: "BY FAITH THE HARLOT RAHAB PERISHED NOT WITH THEM THAT BELIEVE NOT, WHEN SHE HAD RECEIVED THE SPES WITH PEACE." Hebrews 11:31. The other exception was all the silver and gold that would endure fire, and this was to be brought into the Tabernacle and consecrated to the service of God.

In the foregoing we have told "Who broke down the walls of Jericho" Maybe it will relieve some of the readers of this article of embarrassment in the following, which is copied from The Christian Beacon of April 8, 1965.

WHO TAUGHT WHOM? A big of humor helps us along the way now and then. The following anecdote was clipped from the publication, God's Revivalists, published in Cincinnati.

A school inspector, in order to get a standard of teaching in a local community, visited a classroom, and decided to ask some questions.

Calling on one small lad, he asked, "Who broke down the walls of Jericho?" The boy answered, "Sir, I don't know, but it wasn't me."

Turning to the teacher, the inspector asked, "Is this the usual standard in this class?" The teacher replied, "Well, that boy is very honest, so I believe him when he says he didn't do it."

Leaving the room in disgust, the inspector explained the incident to the principal, who apologetically replied, "I have had that teacher for many years, and I am sure that if she knew who broke down those walls, she would have told you."

By this time the questioner was furious, and sought the chairman of the Board of Education. After listening to the story he said, "Well, after all, aren't we making a mountain out of a mole hill? I suggest we just pay for having the wall fixed and write it off under the heading of repairs." — Christian Crusade, August, 1964.

Probably we should "weep" instead of laugh at this anecdote, or maybe a revelation of the truth about the ignorance of great numbers of the about seventy-five millions of this nation who call themselves Christian. We would "weep" and mourn and pray, and possibly "proclaim a fast" if we really believed what God's Word reveals concerning those who "know not God." The law of this greedy "God blessed land" now forbids the Bible and The Lord's Prayer to our schools! Certainly this greedy promotes ignorance of God and His Mighty Works and Providences!

"AND THIS IS LIFE ETERNAL, THAT THEY MIGHT KNOW THEE, THE ONLY TRUE GOD, AND JESUS CHRIST, WHOM THOU HAST SENT!" — John 17:2.

"THUS SAITH THE LORD, LET NOT THE WISE MAN GLORY IN HIS WISDOM, NEITHER LET THE MIGHTY MAN GLORY IN HIS MIGHT, LET NOT THE RICH MAN GLORY IN HIS RICHES; BUT LET HIM THAT GLORIETH GLORY IN THIS, THAT HE UNDERSTANDETH AND KNOWETH ME, THAT I AM THE LORD WHICH EXERCISE LOVING KINDNESS, JUDGMENT, AND RIGHTEOUSNESS, IN THE EARTH: FOR IN THESE THINGS I DELIGHT, SAITH THE LORD." Jeremiah 9:23, 24.

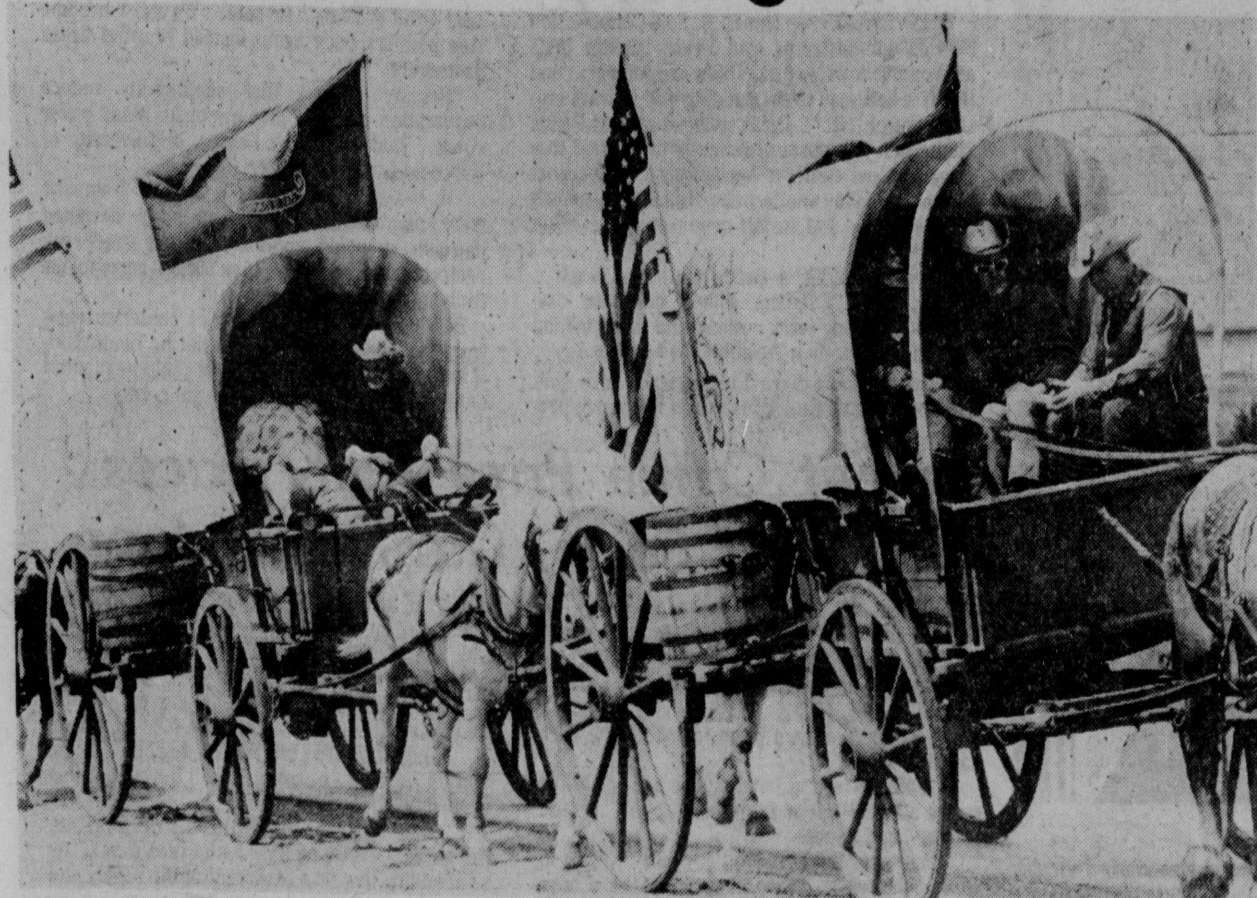

"THE WISE MEN — LO, THEY HAVE REJECTED THE WORD OF THE LORD: AND WHAT WISDOM IS IN THEM?" Jeremiah 8:5. The prediction concerning the rejection of The Word of God by the wise men is that they will be ashamed, dismayed and taken! It appears to us that many of our "wise men" have already been "taken in" by our enemies in many conferences or treaties, but we have not yet got our eyes open enough to be ashamed and dismayed.

"MY PEOPLE ARE DESTROYED FOR LACK OF KNOWLEDGE, I WILL ALSO REJECT THEE — SEEING THOU HAST FORGOTTEN THE LAW OF GOD, I WILL ALSO FORGET THY CHILDREN." Hosea 4:6. From what we read in the papers about the conduct of many of the children of this nation at the sacred season of Easter on the beaches, and on other holidays, there is ground for thinking "God has forgotten our children!" AND JESUS ANSWERING SAID UNTO THEM DO YE NOT THEREFORE ERR, BECAUSE YE KNOW NOT THE SCRIPTURES, NEITHER THE POWER OF GOD? Mark 12:24.

Let us try to God with the Psalmist: "WILT NOT THOU REVIVE US AGAIN, THAT THY PEOPLE MAY REJOICE IN THEE?" Psalm 85:5.

Bicentennial Wagon Train Trek Seasoning Greenhorns

By TOM COOK
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Osceola — The creaking wagons, lathered horses and weather hardened faces are living history of the winning of the West.

The sod of Nebraska is once again being cut by hoofs as a wagon train wends its way across the prairie; only this time the horses face the sunrise when the day's journey begins.

The wagon train, which is paralleling the Oregon Trail, is one of five in the Bicentennial Wagon Train Pilgrimage to Pennsylvania — each follow a different pioneer trail.

Wagonmaster Rollie Hebel of Ennis, Mont., said he had a few greenhorns on the train, which includes nine official wagons and about 50 riders, when it started out from Wyoming this spring after wintering there.

Wagonmaster Went Home

"I got hired as a driver myself when we started out a year ago, but the wagonmaster had to go home, and they put me in charge five days out of Fort Laramie," Hebel said.

The train started out averaging about 20 miles a day, but Hebel said the average in Nebraska has been 28-35.

"Some of the drivers were a little green at the start," the Montana rancher said. "But they're getting an education."

The train followed some parts of the original Oregon Trail in Wyoming, but has rolled along roadides in Nebraska.

Flu Attack Suffered

There have been no serious injuries on the trek and instead of the more historic typhoid or smallpox, the trains' only sickness was a mild attack of flu.

Zavan Green, 81, of Firth, Idaho, is the oldest member of the train and says things have changed a lot since he went the other way as a boy of 16.

Green made the trip from Oklahoma to Idaho with three wagons — one driven by his parents, one by his brother-in-law and the last by himself.

"The horses weren't nearly as good as these are, but I thought a lot more of them because they was my first team, and I was real proud," he said.

Changing wagon wheels along the trail and telling yarns about the old days make Green a valuable and popular traveler.

'Went Up Platte'

"You went by a cornfield once in awhile, but the rest was all grass," he recalls. "We went right up the Platte. There was a track for the wagon and the horses, but the grass came right up to the wagon tongue."

Green said he's wanted to make the return trip for a long time and offered advice to those who say they would like to do something like that — if only.

"You can't wait around for things to be just right. If you get an opportunity to do something you want to, just drop everything and do it."

Some members of the train gave up their jobs or left their ranching operations behind to make the trek.

"We've talked to them some to help where we could," Green said. "Heck, I know a lot more about horses than I do about airplanes."

Travelers Take Pride

Besides reliving history for the bicentennial, Green said people on the train are taking pride in the journey itself.

"We were on the trail three days and an old rancher had us in for dinner and told us we were crazy and would never make it."

"We're going to show them all that it can still be done."

The wagons circled up Friday night in Osceola and the troupe of entertainers accompanying the train put on their heritage show.

Several more stops are planned in Nebraska before the train reaches the Missouri River where the wagons will be loaded on barges for the last leg of the journey to Pennsylvania.

All the wagon trains will arrive in Valley Forge July 4th during a national governors conference to be held there.

The remaining stops in Nebraska include: Saturday and Sunday in Columbus; Schuyler, April 26; North Bend, April 27 and 28; Fremont, April 29; Fort Calhoun, April 30; Omaha, May 1, and Nebraska City May 2.

Indians Following Wagon Train Seek Understanding, Help In Washington

By J. L. SCHMIDT

The caravan following the Trail of Self Determination may well be the last group of American Indians to take their case to Washington D.C., according to Sid Mills, executive director of the Survival of American Indians Association.

Mills and a small following have been trailing the Bicentennial Wagon Train Pilgrimage to Philadelphia since the wagons stopped near Ft. Laramie, Wyoming. They broke off from that group to spend about four days in Lincoln at Indian Expo '76 at the State Fairgrounds.

The trail closely parallels that of the Trail of Broken Treaties, the last mass caravan of Indians to descend on the nation's capital in October 1972.

Mills, a participant in that march, said the group, under the sponsorship of the American Indian Movement, presented a list of 20 demands to the government.

"They said they'd act within 60 days, and it's been almost four years, and nothing has been done," Mills said.

Indian people are getting tired of asking the white bureaucracy to help, Mills said, which is the reason for the talk about this caravan will be the last. Instead, they plan to ask Americans to write to their representatives in Washington and ask them to do something about the plight of the Indians.

The survival group began in 1964. Mills said, to deal specifically with the Medicine Creek Treaty of 1854 which, among other things, gave Indians certain fishing rights in the State of Washington. They expanded their scope to cope with the bicentennial, Mills explained.

"This bicentennial is not a celebration of the principles and dignity of this country," Mills said.

"Any country which would let an agency like the Bureau of Indian Affairs govern a part of its people can't do so with dignity," he added.

He noted that the country has no bureau of anybody else's affairs, they've made no other race of people wards of the country.

This theme will be developed at the Sovereign Native Women's Conference next month at Haskell Institute near Lawrence, Kan., Mills said.

"At that time we hope to develop a blueprint for a new national Indian government, based on the woman and the family," he added.

Literature being distributed by the survival group includes a brochure about the conference which quotes an old Cheyenne proverb, "A nation is not conquered until the hearts of its women are on the ground. Then it is done, no matter how brave its warriors nor how strong its weapons."

Indian people are still asking themselves, "Where is the Justice," Mills said. The Medicine Creek Treaty was before the Supreme Court twice, and upheld both times, the last time in 1968, he said.

"Indians lead every rotten statistic there is in this country. We have the highest birth rate, but the most infant mortality. We have 75% unemployment ... nobody could survive on what we've been asked to live with," he said.

"We're talking about saving lives, not selling arts and crafts," Mills said of the Indian Expo being held in the coliseum across from where the group is camped in several teepees.

"People keep talking about the problems of the Indian, but all they want to do is buy their beads. Once a week, in every city in this country, Indians and Indian ideals are being killed," Mills said.

"More than 100 people have been killed, several more hundred locked up and persecuted as a result of the incident at Wounded Knee in 1873," Mills said, "but they don't get the headlines. Three white people on the reservation and that's another story. The whole world knows about it."

"People have got to understand that we just can't be like them. We have to live as a separate nation and govern our lives. Then, and only then, will the great rip-off stop. We've got to get government to back out of our affairs," Mills concluded.

The caravan plans to resume their following of the Bicentennial Wagon near Omaha about Tuesday, Mills said.

One day as Joshua stood surveying the situation, suddenly he became aware of a man standing nearby with his sword drawn in his hand. Joshua went to him and asked if he was a friend, or a foe. The reply was: "Nay; but as captain of the host of The Lord am I now come." Joshua 5:14.

(We are called upon to meditate upon God's Word: This man might have been the Arch Angel Michael: "And there was war in heaven: Michael and his Angels fought against the dragon — the great dragon — that old serpent called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world..." Rev. 12:7, etc. Or, this man who appeared to Joshua might have been none other than Christ Himself: 1st Corinthians 10:4, etc., tells us Christ was the "Spiritual Rock" with Israel, and He it was who sustained them, and it was Christ whom they tempted by their fornication, and murmuring at the Providences of God, and for which cause God destroyed and killed many thousands of them — and these things are written for our admonition!)

Joshua fell on his face to the earth, and did worship, and said: "WHAT SAITH MY LORD UNTO HIS SERVANT?" The first thing the Captain of The Lord's Host told Joshua was to loose his shoe from his feet, for the ground on which he was, was holy — this same message Moses got when God appeared to him in the Burning Bush! Next the Captain of God's Host gave Joshua instructions how to capture and destroy Jericho. It would require seven days to carry out God's plan. When these orders were obeyed God would throw down the walls of the city! (You unbelievers and those who count these things myths, did you never hear of the havoc wrought by earthquakes, and do you not know that earthquakes never occur without orders of permission from God's Throne? Why don't you act honest enough to get out of a Church founded and developed on the grounds that the entire Bible is the infallible Word of God?) When the walls were thrown down then they were to go up and utterly destroy the city and all therein with sword and fire, with two exceptions: "BY FAITH THE HARLOT RAHAB PERISHED NOT WITH THEM THAT BELIEVE NOT, WHEN SHE HAD RECEIVED THE SPIES WITH PEACE." Hebrews 11:31. The other exception was all the silver and gold that would endure fire, and this was to be brought into the Tabernacle and consecrated to the service of God.

In the foregoing we have told "Who broke down the walls of Jericho!" Maybe it will relieve some of the readers of this article of embarrassment in the following, which is copied from The Christian Beacon of April 8, 1965.

WHO TAUGHT WHOM? A big of humor helps us along the way now and then. The following anecdote was clipped from the publication, God's Revivalists, published in Cincinnati:

A school inspector, in order to get a standard of teaching in a local community, visited a classroom, and decided to ask some questions.

Calling on one small lad, he asked, "Who broke down the walls of Jericho?" The boy answered, "Sir, I don't know, but it wasn't me."

Turning to the teacher, the inspector asked, "Is this the usual standard in this class?" The teacher replied, "Well, that boy is very honest, so I believe him when he says he didn't do it."

Leaving the room in disgust, the inspector explained the incident to the principal, who apologetically replied, "I have had that teacher for many years, and I am sure that if she knew who broke down those walls, she would have told you."

By this time the questioner was furious, and sought the chairman of the Board of Education. After listening to the story he said, "Well, after all, aren't we making a mountain out of a mole hill? I suggest we just pay for having the wall fixed and write it off under the heading of repairs." — Christian Crusade, August, 1964.

Probably we should "weep" instead of laugh at this anecdote, or maybe a revelation of the truth about the ignorance of great numbers of the about seventy-five millions of this nation who call themselves Christian. We would "weep" and mourn and pray, and possibly "proclaim a fast" if we really believed what God's Word reveals concerning those who "know not God!" The law of this greatly "God blessed land" now forbids the Bible and The Lord's Prayer to our schools! Certainly this greatly promotes ignorance of God and His Mighty Works and Providences!

"AND THIS IS LIFE ETERNAL, THAT THEY MIGHT KNOW THEE, THE ONLY TRUE GOD, AND JESUS CHRIST, WHOM THOU HAST SENT!" — John 17:2.

"THUS SAITH THE LORD, LET NOT THE WISE MAN GLORY IN HIS WISDOM, NEITHER LET THE MIGHTY MAN GLORY IN HIS MIGHT, LET NOT THE RICH MAN GLORY IN HIS RICHES; BUT LET HIM THAT GLORIETH GLORY IN THIS, THAT HE UNDERSTANDETH AND KNOWETH ME, THAT I AM THE LORD WHICH EXERCISE LOVING KINDNESS, JUDGMENT, AND RIGHTEOUSNESS, IN THE EARTH: FOR IN THESE THINGS I DELIGHT, SAITH THE LORD." Jeremiah 9:23, 24.

"THE WISE MEN — LO, THEY HAVE REJECTED THE WORD OF THE LORD: AND WHAT WISDOM IS IN THEM." Jeremiah 8:9. The prediction concerning the rejection of The Word of God by the wise men is that they will be ashamed, dismayed and taken! It appears to us that many of our "wise men" have already been "taken in" by our enemies in many conferences or treaties, but we have not yet got our eyes open enough to be ashamed and dismayed!

"MY PEOPLE ARE DESTROYED FOR LACK OF KNOWLEDGE, I WILL ALSO REJECT THEE — SEEING THOU HAST FORGOTTEN THE LAW OF GOD, I WILL ALSO FORGET THY CHILDREN." Hosea 4:6. From what we read in the papers about the conduct of many of the children of this nation at the sacred season of Easter on the beaches, and on other holidays, there is ground for thinking "God has forgotten our children!" AND JESUS ANSWERING SAID UNTO THEM, DO YE NOT THEREFORE ERR, BECAUSE YE KNOW NOT THE SCRIPTURES, NEITHER THE POWER OF GOD? Mark 12:24.

Let us try to God with the Psalmist: "WILT NOT THOU REVIVE US AGAIN: THAT THY PEOPLE MAY REJOICE IN THEE?" Psalm 85:6.

Johnson Named Fairbury Head

Lonnie Johnson, administrative assistant to the president of the Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College, has been named interim director of the Fairbury campus.

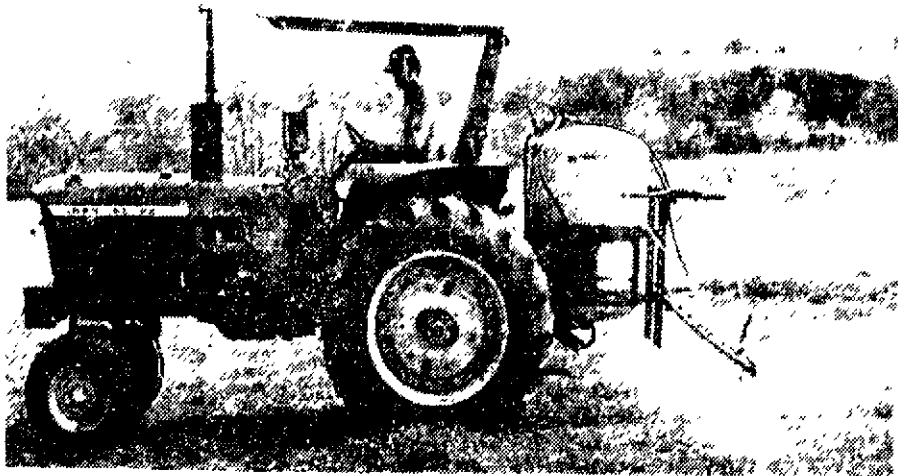

Johnson, who has been with the SeTech area staff since 1974, will serve as Fairbury campus director until a new director is appointed, according to a Friday morning announcement by Dr. Robert Eichler, SeTech area president.

Former Fairbury director Eugene Marcy was relieved of his duties Friday. He had earlier been notified that his contract would not be renewed when it expired June 30.

Eichler said Thursday that Marcy will be "relieved of all responsibilities and decision-making" as campus director, but we will continue to honor his contract through June 30.

Johnson has also served as SeTech area adult education director and area community services director.

He has also worked in the Lincoln Public Schools as principal of the adult high school, central administrative assistant to the schools administration and an Everett Junior High School teacher.

Farmer Sprays His Healthy Thistles

Musk thistles have been growing well because of the spring rains, and Burdette Piening, who farms near Emerald, is spraying his pasture to control the pest weed. Lancaster County extension agents say to get a good kill, the weed must be in the best of health when sprayed. They recommend spraying within the next 10 days to two weeks. (Star Photo)

Student Support Wavers For Ousted SeTech Head

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau
Fairbury — A demonstration at the Fairbury campus of Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College scheduled for Monday apparently will be quite limited.

A student group has called for the demonstration to protest the firing of campus director Dr. Eugene Marcy, who was relieved of his duties this weekend. But at a meeting attended by some 200 students Friday, only about 20 expressed themselves in favor of the protest.

At the same meeting Marcy announced receiving official notice the Lonnie Johnson of the SeTech area staff will serve as interim director beginning Monday. The picketing is timed to begin with his arrival.

Currently Johnson is serving as assistant to Dr. R. Robert Eichler, SeTech president and director of curriculum.

Sandy Compton, school newspaper editor spearheading the effort to retain Marcy, asked students who favor the demonstration to stand. When only 12 responded, faculty members who were present left and a second straw vote was taken. This resulted in the count of approximately 20.

Dissatisfied at the response, Miss Compton said she feels it was not representative of the total student body. Some students were hesitant to vote, she explained, while others were absent.

In brief comments prior to the vote, Marcy thanked students for their support. Told in March that his contract would not be renewed after its June 30 expiration date, he was notified this week that he would be relieved of duties immediately.

A petition of support signed by 120 of the 256 Fairbury students had been presented to the board by Miss Compton.

Truck Rams Into House

Gering (AP) — A truck driver escaped serious injury Thursday when the semi he was driving rammed into a house. Driver James L. Wellman of Gering was treated and released from the Scottsbluff hospital. The house was not occupied at the time of the accident. The house received about $5,000 damage, while the truck sustained an estimated $2,000 damage. Cause of the accident was under investigation.

Crowd Waits For Presley

Omaha (AP) — Elvis Presley performed before a sellout crowd at the Omaha City Auditorium Thursday night, second stop on a seven-city tour. The capacity crowd of 10,546 waited more than an hour after the scheduled 8 p.m. starting time for Presley to make his appearance. The singer's plane was late coming in from Kansas City. Presley sang for about 80 minutes and then went to Denver in his private jetliner.

Yarborough To Undergo Tests

Fairbury (AP) — Jefferson County District Judge William B. Rist has granted a defense motion requesting psychiatric testing for Floyd James Yarborough, who is charged with first degree murder. Yarborough is charged in connection with the Feb. 7 slaying of Cathy Parker, 19, Fairbury. Rist denied a defense motion which contained there was insufficient evidence to hold Yarborough for trial. No trial date has been set.

Adams Fire Hall Dedication Set

Legal Secretaries To Convene

Sessions will be held at the Holiday Inn with the welcome party at Lake McConaughy Friday night. Guest speakers at the convention will include state Sen. Jack Mills, Mrs. Thomas M. Shanahan and William S. Padley, both attorneys in Ogallala, and Ms. LaRue Belcher, principal in the Denver County school system.

Colson Due In Omaha

Omaha (AP) — Charles Colson, former special counsel to former President Richard Nixon, will be in Omaha Monday to discuss his personal experiences and transformation since 1972. Colson, who has written a book, "Born Again," will appear on the University of Nebraska-Omaha campus. He was sentenced for his part in the Watergate scandal.

County Board Staff Figures Not Correct

Inaccurate figures on the Lancaster County Board's budget Kossack, who feels the board may be spending too much on its own staff, said the monthly salary budget for the board and staff four years ago was $2,600. This year it is $11,000 a month.

Symposium Speakers Say Shelterbelts Vital To Area

DENVER (AP) — The U. S. Soil Conservation Service administrator said Friday shelter belts are coming down as fast as they are going up "and this is a bad year to be standing still in wind erosion control." R. M. Davis spoke at a Great Plains Shelterbelt Symposium designed to respond to a Congressional General Accounting Office report which said many shelterbelts are being cut down to raise crops and install center-pivot irrigation systems.

Bryce P. Neidig, a Battle Creek, Neb., farmer said, "Farmers should be more concerned with long-term outlook and more willing to help protect their neighbors' resources."

"Some farmers have the mistaken idea that center-pivot irrigation can in itself be used to prevent wind erosion," he said. "We must become tree planters once again instead of wind break destroyers."

"Research shows that shelterbelts reduce evaporation demand and minimize plant water stress," said Walter T. Bagley, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln forester.

"If 10% of the irrigated land in Nebraska were planted to trees in properly designed patterns, it would provide excellent windbreak protection and add more than 500,000 acres to our timber resources," Bagley said.

Bob Chilvers an SCS District conservationist from Neligh, said trees could not be planted inside the center pivot circles, but could be planted between pivot systems and in the corners.

Recent Cattle Price Rally Faces Acid Test Soon, Cattleman Says

Omaha (AP) — The recent rally in cattle prices will be put to the "acid test" during the next few days, according to an official with the National Livestock Feeders Association (NLFA).

Bill Jones, NLFA executive vice president, noted Friday that beef prices drifted lower each day this week.

"The question at hand is whether or not the steam has gone out of this recent upturn in cattle prices," said Jones.

Jones said retailers are "obviously" trying to work beef prices lower and packers have been resisting those efforts by cutting back on their kills.

"The acid test in this jockeying for position could well come this next week," Jones said, adding that it will be "crucial for cattle feeders to be alert to what is going on."

Jones said most feedlots are current in their marketing activities, and are not over-supplied. Jones attributed this week's downturn to the market taking a "breather," with buyers pausing to analyze the situation.

"After they (the buyers) take a deep breath, the market should resume its upward trend," he said, adding that an assessment of the supply and demand factors in the beef market shows that the "bull phase" has not run its course.

Home Ec College Accredited

The University of Nebraska's College of Home Economics has been granted full accreditation by the American Home Economics Association's Council for Professional Development, according to Dean Hazel Anthony.

The AHEA accreditation program, now in its fifth year, is designed to set minimum standards for home economics professionals.

Dr. Anthony said the UNL college is among fewer than 50 home economics institutions, out of several hundred, to receive accreditation from AHEA, the only home economics accreditation program in the United States. The accreditation is valid for seven years.

Benefits from the accreditation will be many, Dr. Anthony said.

"First, it is important for our graduates, when they apply for jobs or graduate school, to be able to say they studied at an accredited college."

"And perhaps our accreditation will attract other students to come here for graduate work."

"In addition, we hope prospective faculty will look for this accreditation when we are in the process of recruiting. It also should help us maintain a faculty of high quality," she said.

4-H Washington Club Picks Officers

The Nebraska-Washington 4-H Alumni Club elected officers with Joyce Monson of Hastings taking on the president's role.

Other officers named were: president-elect Julie Moravec of Lincoln; Sandra Vandewalle, Lincoln, secretary; and Linda Fitzke of Glenvil, membership chairman.

The club is composed of former 4-H members who have been Nebraska's delegates to the National 4-H Conference in Washington.

This year's delegates, who left for the nation's capitol and the five-day conference Friday, are Scott Johnson of Roseland, Ann Menninga of Palmyra, Roger Buddenberg of Gothenburg, and Susie Hruza of Morse Bluff.

Four Nebraska delegates have annually attended the national 4-H meeting since its inception in 1927.

Two representatives from the 1936 delegation reminisced about the conference 40 years ago. Avery Jaspersen of West Point recalled the hot days, white felt hats, and rain in the tents. Cora Mae Briggs of Lincoln represented the 1936 Nebraska delegation at the conference's silver anniversary in 1952, where Ezra Taft Benson spoke of the 4-H movement as an "army for good."

West Tech College Area Plan Not Power Struggle—Bensman

Scottsbluff (UPI) — The campus president of Nebraska Western College at Scottsbluff said Friday his proposal to replace the present central administrative setup for the Western Nebraska Technical Community College area is not a power struggle.

In an interview, Charles Bensman said, "I just want to run a college the way it should be run."

The area board voted Wednesday night at his suggestion to ask the state auditor's office for an audit of the budget and is scheduled to meet May 4 to consider Bensman's recommendations on a new administrative setup to govern the two campuses at Scottsbluff and Sidney.

The issue, Bensman said, admitting to some personality conflict which he claimed was brought about at least in part by the administrative system, is "setting up a different bureaucratic structure" to run the area.

Under his proposal, the job of the current area chief executive officer, William Placek, would be abolished.

Bensman said the area president function, scaled down somewhat from the powers Placek now has over the two campuses, would be assumed not by him but by the Sidney campus president, John Haas.

As to controls the area president has, Bensman said they were authoritarian and a deliberate attempt to shortchange the two campuses.

Bensman said his proposal could be accomplished without a change in current laws.

College Asks Court To Uphold Law

By United Press International
Western Technical Community college attorneys Friday urged the Nebraska Supreme Court to uphold the constitutionality of a 1975 law revamping the technical community college system.

The request was contained in a written brief filed with the high court in a test case brought against Sheridan County for refusal to turn tax money over to the community college area.

The Sheridan County District Court ruled the 1975 law constitutional and the county appealed.

Strong Winds, Rain, Hail Accompany Storm Front

Heavy thunderstorms moved across central and eastern Nebraska Friday night, bringing rain, hail, winds and tornado clouds.

A tornado was reported on the ground near Wymore, but there was no report of damage, according to the Gage County sheriff's office.

Strong winds, up to more than 50 miles per hour, were reported at Wilcox, located in south central Nebraska. Small hail and strong gusty winds along with heavy rain were reported at nearby Holdrege.

Early Friday, thunderstorms rumbled through eastern Nebraska.

These before dawn storms were accompanied by golfball size hail at both Aurora and Albion.

Half inch hailstones fell in Lincoln early Friday with rainfall measuring .19 of an inch. Top amount of rain received in the state Friday was .80 of an inch at Wahoo, .63 at Valentine, .52 at Norfolk, .50 at Seward, .30 at Nebraska City and .25 at Crete.

The woman was described by the Fotomat attendant as being about 25, black, 5-foot-5, and 180 pounds.

The robber pointed a small caliber handgun at the clerk before running down an alley.

Ancient Custom Is Good Exercise And Fun Too

LIMBERING UP ... Kim Kuzelka stretches muscles.

The record player blared strains of songs from out of the ancient past.

Coins jingled; zills clicked. Hips and arms moved in amazing synchronization.

The dancers were a study in grace and concentration.

As the dance proceeded, it became a battle of mind over muscle. Eventually, the muscles refused to move in the prescribed fashion, yielding spasmodic jerks.

The dancers, students in the YWCA's continuing belly dancing course, persisted. Arms, hips, legs moved to the music.

Veils fluttered in the air. Coins embellishing the costumes allowed observers to hear, as well as see, movements.

Belly dancing has changed through the centuries, said instructor Ann Bauers.

No one knows where it started. Or when. But it was depicted in pictures on Egyptian tombs constructed as early as 5,000 B.C. It once was a fertility rite, a method of mate selection, she said.

Some of the more obscene movements have been dropped, she said. Hence, belly dancing has become an "art form" considered in some circles as an ethnic folk dance, although still sensual.

Interest in belly dancing is flourishing, Mrs. Bauers said. When she started teaching a year ago, she had one class; now she has six.

Enthusiasm for the physically taxing dance isn't restricted to young women. She has taught teens and grandmothers. Students have ranged in age from 14 to 65.

Suzanne Pickard said her husband thinks she's "a little crazy" for getting involved in belly dancing. "He accepts it as one of my crazy things."

Why belly dancing, the students were asked.

"That's what everybody asks," they responded in unison. "It's good exercise ... and fun."

Creative, too, since you can't get the feel of the dance in bluejeans and a sweatshirt, each student has made her own costume ... or costumes. Some are simple; others ornate and exotic.

But they're all expensive. The gold coins run about $20 per costume; the material, 10 to 11 yards per outfit, costs as much as $3 a yard.

The students agreed they don't plan to pack their costumes away when the classes end. They'll continue to practice ... and get that exercise.

The students have endured

sore muscles ... some muscles they didn't know they had. They've toned their muscles; some have lost weight.

Belly dancing "is a way of exercising — femininely," Mrs. Bauers said. The music, the steps, the exercises are all tied together into one graceful whole.

It's certainly more interesting, more appealing than sit ups, she said.

STRETCH ... instructor Ann Bauers works on mobility.

Abby Says Forget Your Pride, Blow Whistle On Rat

DEAR ABBY: I'm well over 21, and old enough to know better, but six months ago I started dating the golf pro at our club.

It all started when I took some lessons from him to improve my game. One thing led to another very quickly, and he asked me to marry him. I was walking on air. Then he said we would have to postpone the marriage for about a year due to some financial obligations he had to clear up first.

In order to speed up the marriage I let him have $2,500. Then I found out that he has been seeing another woman. Now I realize that he was only using me, but I must admit he certainly improved my game.

I have too much pride to report him to the club manager, but I would like to get my money back. Any suggestions?

TWELVE HANDICAP

DEAR TWELVE: Forget your pride and tell the club manager that the golf pro is under par in integrity. And don't get so chummy with professional swingers again unless you can remember to keep your head down and your eye on your purse!

DEAR ABBY: I have a nodding acquaintance with a woman who goes overboard when it comes to "remembering" people on their birthdays, anniversaries and all the holidays.

She remembers people she never sees and hardly knows, and I, for one, wish that she would quit "remembering" me because I feel guilty if I don't acknowledge her card.

I always write her a "thank-you" note because I don't feel right ignoring her "good wishes." It's easier than calling her on the phone because she likes to visit, and I don't care for long drawn-out telephone conversations. (She kept me on the phone once for nearly an hour when I phoned to thank her for sending me an Easter card.)

Tell me, Abby, is it necessary to acknowledge a greeting card? If you say it isn't, I'll dance for joy.

A BUSY LADY

DEAR BUSY: Don't dance, dear. All expressions of good wishes should be acknowledged. Get a stack of postcards, and do it the easy way.

DEAR ABBY: I am a high school freshman, and my mother still wants me in the house by 12 o'clock sharp every time I go out on a date.

How can I let her know that I'm not a baby any more?

LYNNE

DEAR LYNNE: She knows. That's why she wants you in the house at 12 o'clock sharp.

DEAR ABBY: Is it still "in style" for a young man to ask the father of a young lady for her hand in marriage, or isn't that done any more? Our children, who are 19 and 21, tell us that this is "corny" and that we are old-fashioned to expect it. We would like your opinion.

OLD-FASHIONED PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: It may be "corny," but there's a kernel of good manners there. It is a formality, however. When a fellow asks for a lady's "hand," he usually has both feet in the door.

Bridge An Expert Declarer Never Relaxes, Even On 'Easy' Hands

Opening lead - three of clubs.

One trait that distinguishes the expert declarer from the run-of-the-mill declarer is that he does not relax his vigil in the so-called easy hands. The expert constantly worries about what will happen to him if the adverse cards are distributed unfavorably.

Here is a typical case where it would be easy to go wrong. Let's say South wins the club lead with the king and leads a low trump. West follows low and dummy's jack wins, East showing out.

This is the end of the road for declarer because, sooner or later, he must lose two trump tricks and go down one. He could attribute this to bad luck, but the fact is that he himself is responsible for losing the slam.

The point is that South can see from the word go that the slam is ice-cold if he loses only one trump trick. All his other suits are solid. The only way he can lose two trump tricks is if the suit is divided 4-0.

Such a division occurs in only one deal out of ten, and usually this possibility is negligible compared to other dangers that confront declarer. But here there is no other threat on the horizon, and so South should concentrate on the possible 4-0 division. He should win the opening club lead in dummy and play a low trump to the king.

When East shows out, it is not difficult for declarer to hold himself to one trump loser. West's 10-9-4 can easily be trapped later on.

It is true that the low trump lead to the king would not succeed if East had the A-10-9-4, but nothing could save declarer in that case. A low trump lead from dummy at trick two protects against everything that is protectable.

Belly Dancing

Ancient Custom Is Good Exercise And Fun Too

The record player blared strains of songs from out of the ancient past.

Coins jingled; zills clicked. Hips and arms moved in amazing synchronization.

The dancers were a study in grace and concentration.

As the dance proceeded, it became a battle of mind over muscle. Eventually, the muscles refused to move in the prescribed fashion, yielding spasmodic jerks.

The dancers, students in the YWCA's continuing belly dancing course, persisted. Arms, hips, legs moved to the music. Veils fluttered in the air. Coins embellishing the costumes allowed observers to hear, as well as see, movements.

Belly dancing has changed through the centuries, said instructor Ann Bauers.

No one knows where it started. Or when. But it was depicted in pictures on Egyptian tombs constructed as early as 5,000 B.C. It once was a fertility rite, a method of mate selection, she said.

Some of the more obscene movements have been dropped, she said. Hence, belly dancing has become an "art form" considered in some circles as an ethnic folk dance, although still sensual.

Interest in belly dancing is flourishing, Mrs. Bauers said. When she started teaching a year ago, she had one class; now she has six.

Enthusiasm for the physically taxing dance isn't restricted to young women. She has taught teens and grandmothers. Students have ranged in age from 14 to 65.

Suzanne Pickard said her husband thinks she's "a little crazy" for getting involved in belly dancing. "He accepts it as one of my crazy things."

Why belly dancing, the students were asked.

"That's what everybody asks," they responded in unison. "It's good exercise ... and fun."

Creative, too, since you can't get the feel of the dance in bluejeans and a sweatshirt, each student has made her own costume ... or costumes. Some are simple; others ornate and exotic.

But they're all expensive. The gold coins run about $20 per costume; the material, 10 to 11 yards per outfit, costs as much as $3 a yard.

The students agreed they don't plan to pack their costumes away when the classes end. They'll continue to practice ... and get that exercise.

The students have endured

sore muscles ... some muscles they didn't know they had. They've toned their muscles; some have lost weight.

Belly dancing "is a way of exercising — femininely," Mrs. Bauers said. The music, the steps, the exercises are all tied together into one graceful whole.

It's certainly more interesting, more appealing than sit ups, she said.

Abby Says Forget Your Pride, Blow Whistle On Rat

DEAR ABBY: I'm well over 21, and old enough to know better, but six months ago I started dating the golf pro at our club.

It all started when I took some lessons from him to improve my game. One thing led to another very quickly, and he asked me to marry him. I was walking on air. Then he said we would have to postpone the marriage for about a year due to some financial obligations he had to clear up first.

In order to speed up the marriage I let him have $2,500. Then I found out that he has been seeing another woman. Now I realize that he was only using me, but I must admit he certainly improved my game.

I have too much pride to report him to the club manager, but I would like to get my money back. Any suggestions?

TWELVE HANDICAP

DEAR TWELVE: Forget your pride and tell the club manager that the golf pro is under par in integrity. And don't get so chummy with professional swingers again unless you can remember to keep your head down and your eye on your purse!

DEAR ABBY: I have a nodding acquaintance with a woman who goes overboard

when it comes to "remembering" people on their birthdays, anniversaries and all the holidays.

She remembers people she never sees and hardly knows, and I, for one, wish that she would quit "remembering" me because I feel guilty if I don't acknowledge her card.

I always write her a "thank-you" note because I don't feel right ignoring her "good wishes." It's easier than calling her on the phone because she likes to visit, and I don't care for long drawn-out telephone conversations. (She kept me on the phone once for nearly an hour when I phoned to thank her for sending me an Easter card.) Tell me, Abby, is it necessary to acknowledge a greeting card? If you say it isn't, I'll dance for joy.

A BUSY LADY

DEAR BUSY: Don't dance, dear. All expressions of good wishes should be acknowledged. Get a stack of postcards, and do it the easy way.

DEAR ABBY: I am a high school freshman, and my mother still wants me in the house by 12 o'clock sharp every time I go out on a date.

How can I let her know that I'm not a baby any more?

LYNNE

DEAR LYNNE: She knows. That's why she wants you in the house at 12 o'clock sharp.

DEAR ABBY: Is it still "in style" for a young man to ask the father of a young lady for her hand in marriage, or isn't that done any more? Our children, who are 19 and 21, tell us that this is "corny" and that we are old-fashioned to expect it. We would like your opinion.

OLD-FASHIONED PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: It may be "corny," but there's a kernel of good manners there. It is a formality, however. When a fellow asks for a lady's "hand," he usually has both feet in the door.

One trait that distinguishes the expert declarer from the run-of-the-mill declarer is that he does not relax his vigil in the so-called easy hands. The expert constantly worries about what will happen to him if the adverse cards are distributed unfavorably.

Here is a typical case where it would be easy to go wrong. Let's say South wins the club lead with the king and leads a low trump. West follows low and dummy's jack wins, East showing out.

This is the end of the road for declarer because, sooner or later, he must lose two trump tricks and go down one. He could attribute this to bad luck, but the fact is that he himself is responsible for losing the slam.

The point is that South can see from the word go that the slam is ice-cold if he loses only one trump trick. All his other suits are solid. The only way he can lose two trump tricks is if the suit is divided 4-0.

Such a division occurs in only one deal out of ten, and usually this possibility is negligible compared to other dangers that confront declarer. But here there is no other threat on the horizon, and so South should concentrate on the possible 4-0 division. He should win the opening club lead in dummy and play a low trump to the king.

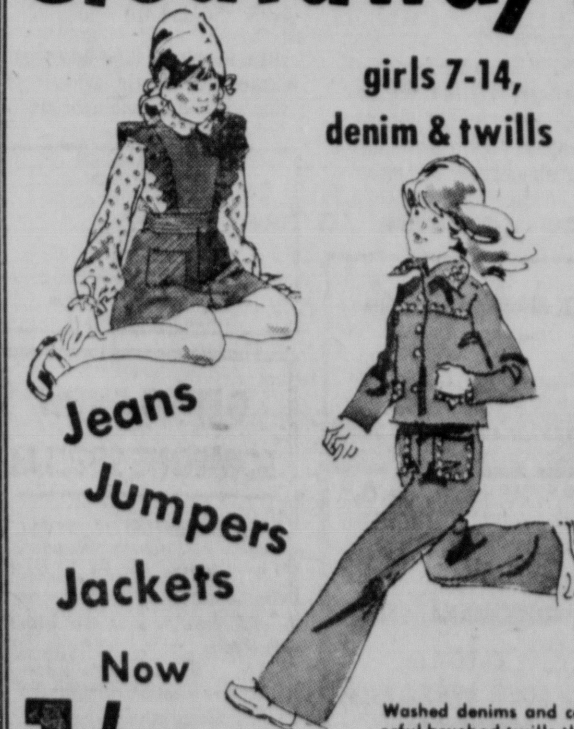

When East shows out, it is not difficult for declarer to hold himself to one trump loser. West's 10-9-4 can easily be trapped later on.

It is true that the low trump lead to the king would not succeed if East had the A-10-9-4, but nothing could save declarer in that case. A low trump lead from dummy at trick two protects against everything that is protectable.

Truman Heroics Said Part Myth

By CYNTHIA JOHNSON
Star Staff Writer

The heroic mantle that has been draped around former President Harry Truman is woven, in large part, of myth, according to Indiana University history Prof. Richard S. Kirkendall.

Compared to other U.S. presidents and presidential candidates, Truman "was one of the best," Kirkendall said Friday.

However, recent portrayals of Truman exaggerate certain aspects of his personality and fail to define the "whole or essential" Truman.

Kirkendall, a Truman scholar and executive secretary of the Organization of American Historians, is in Lincoln to participate in a two-day conference on history teaching, sponsored by the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's department of history.

The current "tendency to make a hero out of Truman" is a result of people's dissatisfaction with the political leadership of the last decade or so," Kirkendall said.

And this inclination to think of politicians in heroic terms is "unhealthy," he continued.

"The political process is suffering from unrealistic expectations" in terms of what people want from politicians. The act of putting Truman on a pedestal "feeds this process," Kirkendall said.

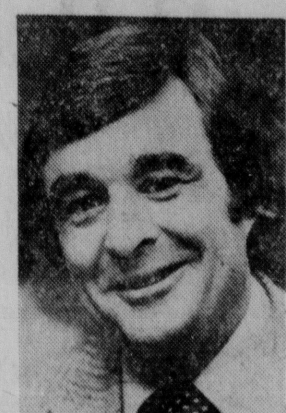

"If we would compare what we have with what Truman was, in fact, we would have a healthier situation."

People have been offered lately a "promoter's" version of what Truman was, he said, making reference to books by Margaret Truman and Merle Miller, and James Whitmore's dramatic interpretation in "Giv 'Em Hell, Harry."

Despite their appeal, Kirkendall said, these portraits of Truman are filled with factual errors.

He cited a recent television program about the conflict between Truman and Gen. Douglas MacArthur as a good example.

airborne battle of wills between the two men over whose plane would land first on Wake Island is "a nice story." But the fact was "MacArthur had been on the ground for 12 hours" before Truman's plane arrived.

Factual errors aside, Kirkendall said today's Truman cultists "project a one-sided view" of the man.

"My conviction is that there is much more to Truman than" the combative, fiercely independent individual they portray, he said.

Had Truman been as combative as his promoters say, he wouldn't have succeeded in Missouri politics; wouldn't have been nominated as the 1944 vice presidential candidate by warring Democrats; and wouldn't have gained Republican support for his foreign policy, Kirkendall asserted.

In exaggerating Truman's independent nature, promoters overlook the fact that "he also behaved as a politician... he made deals, he conciliated."

If Truman were alive today, he would probably be happy with his late-blooming popularity, Kirkendall said. The hero-makers have created a picture of Truman that is "in harmony with the image he tried to project in the late years of his life."

However, Kirkendall predicted that this image will eventually be replaced by a "more accurate portrayal" of the man.

Suit Asks Prison Kitchen Cleanup

By WES ALBERS
Star Staff Writer

A class action suit filed against three corrections officials Friday claims unhealthy conditions in Nebraska Penal Complex kitchens constitute "cruel and unusual" punishment.

The U.S. District Court suit seeks a court-ordered, court-enforced cleanup. If officials don't comply, the kitchens should be closed, it says.

Filed by a Nebraska Civil Liberties Union (NCLU) attorney, the suit names inmates Kenneth Robinson and David Moreno on all prisoners' behalf. Correctional Services Director Joe Vitek, Warden Robert Parratt and Associate Warden William Foster are named as defendants.

"It's hard to make any comment until we confer with the attorney general's office," Vitek said. "I'm sure both sides will file motions."

A cleanup began several weeks ago, he said.

Last week, Health Department inspector Gary Hokek visited the reformatory main kitchen at Vitek's request and found "a 100% improvement." An inspection is set for next week, Hokek said.

Penitentiary and reformatory kitchens "are now and have consistently over the past been unsanitary and wholly unfit for human use and habitation, creating an imminent danger to the (inmates') health," the suit contends.

It says food "partially eaten by mice or contaminated by mice feces" is served to inmates, foods "are often partially spoiled and of very poor quality" and kitchen workers clean with "inadequate... tools and materials."

"... the food served is greasy, bland, of poor quality, partially spoiled, generally unwholesome, occasionally in short supply and nutritionally inadequate..." it claims.

The suit asks that:
—Inmates get "three wholesome and nutritious meals a day served with proper eating and drinking utensils."

—Food service supervisors have bachelor's level (or equivalent) training in dietetics.

—A registered dietician be hired "to assist in menu planning, methods of food preparation, purchasing standards and sanitation."

—Inmates who require special diets (for health or religious reasons) be given them.

According to State Health Department records examined by The Star, the reformatory and penitentiary main kitchens received 107 and 77 demerits respectively in inspections last month. Thirty-one to 40 demerits indicates sanitation barely complying with minimum federal guidelines.

One Health Department spokesman said the kitchens have been above 40 demerits since 1968.

Beatrice Bypass Hearing Approved

By United Press International

The Nebraska Highway Commission, after some urging by Beatrice residents, Friday voted to hold a public hearing on the controversial U.S. Highway 77 truck bypass.

The commission also gave a delegation of Farmers from the Plattsmouth area something to smile about when it endorsed a new recommendation that would locate a proposed Omaha to Nebraska City expressway on the present route of U.S. Highways 73-75 at Plattsmouth.

"My family has had that farm for 20 years," Jerry Bethel of rural Plattsmouth told the commission in expressing his thanks for rescinding the commission's 2-year-old decision to route the expressway west of the existing highway across his and other farms.

"This is what we've advocated all these years," said another area farmer, Richard Cole.

The Beatrice delegation told the commission there should be an opportunity for community residents to express their views no matter which of the three proposed bypass routes seemed best on paper right now.

The project, until Friday, was on the State Roads Department's future list.

Commission member Karl Dickinson of Lincoln offered a motion to place the project in the state's five-year highway plan. The motion carried and cleared the way for a public hearing.

Thomas Doyle, state roads director, said later a hearing would probably be scheduled this summer.

The proposed western bypass route would be 3.6 miles long, requiring acquisition of 35 acres of land and cost an estimated $2.3 million. The through-town route would be 3 miles long, require no land acquisition and cost $2.9 million. The east route would be 7 miles long, require 88 acres of land, and cost $4.6 million.

The project would include a downtown Madison bypass.

Moyer appeared before the commission asking for an idea on when the project would be started, saying the road is in bad shape and the sooner the department could get to it the better.

Law May Delay Road Construction Bids

State Engineer Tom Doyle said the Department of Roads' June construction bid lettings could be delayed unless technical flaws in the new Federal Aid Highway Act are corrected by mid-May. A technical mistake in the bill was discovered after it passed both houses of Congress, Doyle said.

Penal Complex Guard Suspended Indefinitely

A Penal Complex guard who sued prison officials this week has been indefinitely suspended pending investigation of charges against him, Correctional Services Director Joe Vitek said Friday.

Hawkins' suit in Lancaster

County District Court claims his demotion was based on "unjust, improper and untrue accusations" that he was a homosexual and had smuggled marijuana into the penitentiary.

The suit asks the court to reinstate Hawkins and to enjoin prison officials from using unofficial personnel files.

Less Drudgery... ... More Living

That's what retirement has meant to Fred and Frances. Of course, they spent close to forty years getting themselves ready.

They learned the richness of living... the adventures of believing and serving and sacrificing. They surrounded themselves with people who care, who are concerned, who like helping others. They based their lives on truths and ideals that do not change with every passing opportunity or disappointment. They found God.

Not the REST. Who looks forward to idleness?

Rather THE REST... the years not yet lived... the unfolding culmination of our destiny as children of God.

In the lives of Fred and Frances, retirement has been one more Christian adventure. And a blessing to their church, their community and their family. They have more time now for things they ALWAYS valued most.

THERYATTS by Jack Elrod

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST by SIDNEY OMARR

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You have to review, revise, read between the lines — and build on a more solid base. Don't rely too heavily on others. Do what must be done in direct, specific and thorough manner. Aquarius, Taurus and Scorpio could be in picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Changes, the creative process — these are highlighted. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons could be in scenario. Accent on nerve, style, the hearing of your own drummer. Means be you — the world will get in step!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may be pushing away those who would be genuine and valuable allies. Know it and review situation. Be diplomatic — correct breach within family circle. Domestic adjustment is necessary. You gain through understanding, not force or argument.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): See people as they are — a romantic haze could create distortions. Know it and make necessary corrections. Short-term proposition could be "fluffy" and lack substance. Pisces, Virgo might be involved.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Money position gets stronger — even though you may not immediately be aware of it. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure in important ways. Spotlight on possessions, payments, collections, basic budget and income.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Finish rather than initiate projects. Lunar cycle enables you to "close" for better deal or arrangement than originally anticipated. Update objectives, imprint style. You are due for more attention — most if it favorable.

IF APRIL 24 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have unusual voice, a sweet tooth, compassion for persons who are less privileged than you. Possible change of residence, domestic adjustment could be featured in 1976. Taurus, Libra individuals play important roles in your life. November could be an outstanding month for you this year.

NU Trackmen Impressive At Drake Relays

By BOB OWENS

Star Sports Editor

Des Moines, Ia. — There were a lot of great performances Friday in the 67th Drake Relays, including the 10th best four-mile relay ever run in the world and a Drake record in the 800-meter run.

But, in Nebraska coach Frank Sevigne's mind, the effort of an super-undersized two-mile relay team was all-american through the Cornhuskers finished in third place.

The amazing thing is that the new mark is 3.6 seconds better than the old one set in the 1971 Drake Relays by Jim Hawkins, Greg Carlberg, Roger Chadwick and Larry Clinto. Their mark was 7:24.5.

"It's really great and a lot of fun to be contending again," Sevigne said. "That was a tremendous performance, particularly when you consider that the team was made up of two juniors, a sophomore and a freshman."

The Huskers were in a blanket finish at the wire, beaten out of first by 21 seconds by Baylor and out of second by .07 seconds by Wisconsin.

The 880-yard splits were 1:51.2 by Reckmeyer, 1:50.4 by Whitaker, 1:49.9 by McClain and 1:49.4 by Fisher.

As a result of that performance, coupled with a .47.2 anchor leg by Ray Mahoney, freshman from Mandeville, Jamaica, in an unsuccessful mile relay bid, sparked Sevigne's hopes for Saturday's distance medley relay race.

He plans to lead off with Fisher in the 880, then go with Mahoney in the 440, Reckmeyer in the three-quarter mile and anchor the race with Harold Stelzer, sophomore from Scituate, Mass., in the mile run.

The mile relay team of Tom Dowel, Pat McKenzie, Chuck Malito and Mahoney placed fourth in its heat in 3:13.74, but failed to qualify for the finals.

The Huskers had a couple of disappointments earlier in the day.

Malito, who ran a 51.4 in the 440-yard intermediate hurdles here a year ago, failed to qualify in the event, which this year was contested at the metric distance of 400 meters.

His time of 53.27, good for third in his heat, is the equivalent of a 53.7 in yards. The 400 meter race is 2.6 yards shorter than 440 yards.

The other disappointment was Scott Sorchik's failure to defend his Drake javelin title, but he had an excuse. Conditions were less than ideal following a cloudburst early in the morning.

Sorchik needed a final toss of 229 feet, 6 inches to take third place. Going into the meet, his best throw this spring had been 242.7 ft. He won last week at the Kansas Relays.

performance to win the four-mile relay, despite substitute leadoff runner Chris Perez's 4:13.4 time in the mile.

The Wildcat's second runner, Keith Palmer, clocked 4:03.5. Then Don Akin brought KSU from sixth place to second with a 4:01.8 mile. Jeff Schemmel anchored the victory with a 3:59.8 time for an overall 16:18.28 clocking.

That was just 37 seconds over the American record and beat the all-time Big Eight best, previously set by K-State (16:21.8) in the Texas Relays.

Ben Plucknett, the Beatrice native who is in his senior season at Missouri, couldn't prevent Jim McGoldrick of Texas from getting a triple in the midlands relay circuit in the discus throw.

Plucknett was under his season best with a 194.3 throw for second behind McGoldrick's 196-6. Nebraska's Steve Millard, a sophomore from North Bellmore, N.Y., had a best throw of 160-11 and didn't place.

performance was the special 400-meter intermediate hurdle race which saw Ralph Mann, No. 1-ranked in the world, nip Kansas' all-around athlete Nolan Cromwell at the wire.

Cromwell, who has been spending an hour a day with the KU football team (for which he is the quarterback), hit the seventh hurdle and lost his balance while leading the race.

He came back, though, and the pair went over the last hurdle dead even. Mann won the final struggle between two tired men.

"I just had to jump the eighth hurdle and hope I made it over," Cromwell said of the barrier following his misfortune. "I was a little displeased because I tied up. My trail leg is still slow. But now that football practice is over, I can concentrate on my hurdles."

The report is that Cromwell spent an hour a day this spring with the Jayhawk football team, but did nothing but work on his passing.

opponents! He proved a year ago he's a terrific runner from the wishbone formation.

Meanwhile, Western Kentucky's Nick Rose, voted the 1975 relays' most valuable player, cruised to a 75-yard victory margin in the 5,000 meter in 13:41, shaving five seconds off the old mark.

Eastern New Mexico's Mike Bort took the 800-meter in 1:46.1, breaking the old standard of 1:46.4, while Oklahoma's Brian Nichols upset two-time Drake winner Charlton Ehzuellen of Illinois in the long jump by jumping 24-7 1/2 to Ehzuellen's 24-3 1/2.

Indoor world record holder Dan Ripley of the Pacific Coast Club finished second to Terry Porter of the Gulf Coast Track Club in the pole vault. Both cleared 17 feet, but Porter was awarded first place on the basis of fewer misses.

Mark Collins of Baylor set an event record in the 400-meters with a 46.01

Winum Homer Sparks NU Past Kansas, 4-2

By KEN HAMBLETON

Star Sports Writer

Nebraska managed just three hits off Kansas righthander Roger Slagle Friday afternoon at the NU Diamond. But one of those hits was a three-run homer by Larry Winum that proved the difference as the Huskers won 4-2.

NU lefthander Kirk Eymann, who gave up one unearned run in the first and one earned run on three consecutive singles in the second, didn't permit a Jayhawk past second base after the second inning striking out 12 and giving up six hits to keep the Huskers in the contest, and boost his record to 3-2.

KU's Slagle, who hadn't allowed an earned run before last week's loss to Kansas State, was overpowering, striking out seven batters in three innings.

Husker designated hitter Randy Benish drove a single to left field in the second inning and Winum reached first on a walk, but those were the only baserunners allowed until the third inning.

Slagle ran the count to two balls and no strikes, missing with two curve balls and then fired a low fastball which Winum slammed over the right field fence to put the Huskers in the lead 3-2.

"I knew the pitch was coming because he had gotten behind on me," said Winum, a sophomore from Bloomington, Minn. "The pitch was at my knees but it was where I could hit it."

Nebraska added an insurance run in the fourth when Bobby Thomas singled, stole second and went to third on a grounder to first base. Anderson then grounded to the shortstop who bobbled the ball allowing Thomas to score.

In the game, there were 27 strikeouts and only three walks given up by each pitcher.

KU threatened in the sixth when Carl Heinrich reached second on an error and went to third on a ground out at first base. But Eymann struck out the next two batters after running the count full.

The win boosted NU's record to 15-20-1 and evened its Big Eight record at 4-4, while dropping Kansas to 17-11 overall and 4-4 in the conference.

"I knew I had to keep Kansas' runs down because Slagle is such a good pitcher," said Eymann. Slagle, now 5-2, gained his fifth straight win April 2 when he struck out 17 Huskers in a 9-0 win at Lawrence, Kan.

"I tried to throw past everybody in the early innings and kept getting into trouble," said Eymann, a junior from Papillion. "I threw about 160 pitches in nine innings and 75 of those in the first three innings."

"But Jon (catcher Henne) called a good game and we started mixing up the pitches real well," Eymann said. "I started to get tired but my adrenaline started flowing in the late innings and I wanted the decision. I'm glad I went the whole way because we have to start getting ready for the nine-inning Big Eight baseball tournament games in two weeks."

The Huskers will host Kansas in a Saturday doubleheader at 1 p.m.

Huskers Please Osborne

By DAVE SITTLER

Heading into Saturday afternoon's scrimmage, Nebraska football coach Tom Osborne admits he's pleased.

"Overall, I think it's been a good spring," Osborne said Friday afternoon of the spring drill that started on March 31 and will conclude next Saturday with the annual Red-White game.

"We've probably put in more offense and defense than in any past spring," Osborne continued after sending his charges through a two-hour drill. "And the players' attitudes have been good all spring."

Osborne has set this afternoon's scrimmage for 1:15 p.m. at Memorial Stadium. The Husker head man indicated he will open the practice with 20 minutes of punt return work.

With the player figured to be the No. 1 punt returner next fall, Bobby Thomas, concentrating on baseball this spring, Osborne plans to take a close look at several other possible candidates for the return duties.

Those figuring to get the most action returning kicks against live coverage today will be Ted Harvey, Dave Butterfield, Kenny Brown and Rene Anderson.

"We'll also be checking some young players who like to get down and cover punts," Osborne said. "We don't like to work too much on punt returns because of the risk of injury, but we'll have to spend some time on it today."

The Cornhusker coach said the scrimmage would follow the normal pattern of each player seeing action in three, 10-minute segments.

Under this system, Osborne said, "no one plays more than 30 minutes and some less than that because of alternates."

Middle guard will continue to receive special scrutinizing, according to Osborne.

Jeff Pullen, who has been running with the No. 1 Black Shirt defensive unit, has returned after nursing an injury. Freshman Rod Horn also has returned.

"Middle guard is still muddled," Osborne said. "Oudious Lee (freshman from Omaha South) has looked good in practice. It's still not a clear-cut position."

Only five or six players are expected to miss the scrimmage because of injuries. The most serious injured is Budge Porter, who remains hospitalized after suffering a severe neck injury in Wednesday's practice.

Nebraska trainer George Sullivan said Porter continues to show improvement but indicated that the Nebraska City sophomore still faces a long road to complete recovery.

Islanders Take T-N, Eye Big 10, State Meet

By CHUCK SINCLAIR

Prep Sports Writer

By the time the girls state track meet rolls around, Grand Island coach Dave Vondra's Islanders will have had the opportunity to compete against virtually all of the Class A title contenders.

And if the results of Friday's Trans-Nebraska Conference meet are any indication of what's to follow, Vondra's Islanders will also have beaten all the contenders.

The defending Class A state champions made the conference meet look like a cakewalk enroute to a 36 point win over runnerup Lincoln East at Stuart Stadium.

But Vondra is quick to point out that the results of the GI Invitational, Fremont Invite and Trans-Nebraska aren't enough to label the Islanders a sure bet for the May 14-15 state meet in North Platte.

"Sure, we had the chance to see some Metro schools at Fremont, and Omaha Central at our invitational," he said. "But it's hard to say how it will all come out. As a team in each of the meets we've run in, we've done a tremendous job. But when you throw everyone in the same meet, you just don't know how it will go."

Vondra was referring to the fact that Grand Island picked up just four first places in the Trans meet, but five seconds that helped immensely.

"You just don't know how those seconds will hold up in state competition," he added. "They might not even score when you get a complete field."

That's unlikely, as two seconds came from sprinter Lu Lee, finisher behind defending state champion Cindy Tatum of North Platte in both the 100 and 220, pushing Tatum to record times.

All four of Grand Island's wins (Cindy Vogel, 440; Jodi Frahm, 880 and the 440 and 880 relay) were in record time for the meet.

The 440 and 880 relay times, 50.1 and 1:45.5, were both the best in the state this year, while Vogel's 440 time ranks her second on that list.

Tatum's 100 time of :10.9 ties her best mark this year while the 220 clocking of :25.4 is the best recorded.

"We knew there were some good individuals at this meet from Lincoln," Vondra said. "But we didn't know how well each school would do because the girls are spread out so well."

The Lincoln coaches aren't even sure how their teams will fare from one week to the next.

In the first meet of the year, Southeast won the Lincoln Relays. Lincoln High won the city championship, but both East and Northeast finished ahead of those two schools in the Trans-Nebraska meet.

A total of seven records were established under a threat of rain that never materialized, but kept conditions muggy. Lincoln High's Teresa Schoonover was the only Capital City entrant to reach the record book with a 5:37.3 clocking in the mile, a new event.

Schoonover bettered her previous best of 5:41.5, but maintained her fourth position on the track charts.

The full field moves on to stiff competition next week at Grand Island, Hastings and North Platte meet in the Big 10 meet at Norfolk Saturday and the Lincoln teams venture to Rabston for the Eastern I-80 Conference meet.

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Des Moines, Ia. — There were a lot of great performances Friday in the 67th Drake Relays, including the 10th best four-mile relay ever run in the world and a Drake record in the 800-meter run.

But, in Nebraska coach Frank Sevig's mind, the effort of an all-underclassman two-mile relay team was super even though the Cornhuskers finished in third place.

The amazing thing is that the new mark is 3.6 seconds better than the old one set in the 1971 Drake Relays by Jim Hawkins, Greg Carberg, Roger Chadwick and Larry Climato. Their mark was 7:24.5.

"It's really great and a lot of fun to be contending again," Sevig said. "That was a tremendous performance, particularly when you consider that the team was made up of two juniors, a sophomore and a freshman."

The Huskers were in a blanket finish at the wire, beaten out of first by .21 seconds by Baylor and out of second by .07 seconds by Wisconsin.

The 880-yard splits were 1:51.2 by Reckmeyer, 1:50.4 by Whitaker, 1:49.9 by McClain and 1:49.4 by Fisher.

As a result of that performance, coupled with a .47.2 anchor leg by Ray Mahoney, freshman from Mandeville, Jamaica, in an unsuccessful mile relay bid, sparked Sevig's hopes for Saturday's distance medley relay race.

He plans to lead off with Fisher in the 880, then go with Mahoney in the 440, Reckmeyer in the three-quarter mile and anchor the race with Harold Stelzer, sophomore from Scituate, Mass., in the mile run.

The mile relay team of Tom Dovel, Pat McKenzie, Chuck Malito and Mahoney placed fourth in its heat in 3:13.74, but failed to qualify for the finals.

The Huskers had a couple of disappointments earlier in the day.

Malito, who ran a .51.4 in the 440-yard intermediate hurdles here a year ago, failed to qualify in the event, which this year was contested at the metric distance of 400 meters.

His time of :53.27, good for third in his heat, is the equivalent of a :53.7 in yards. The 400 meter race is 2.6 yards shorter than 440 yards.

The other disappointment was Scott Sorchik's failure to defend his Drake javelin title, but he had an excuse. Conditions were less than ideal following a cloudburst early in the morning.

Sorchik needed a final toss of 229 feet, 6 inches to take third place. Going into the meet, his best throw this spring had been 242-7/8. He won last week at the Kansas Relays.

Even in placing third, the junior from Sussex, N.J., had a better throw than his winning distance of 227-6 here a year ago.

Kansas State, the Big Eight's indoor champion, came through with a brilliant performance to win the four-mile relay, despite substitute leadoff runner Chris Perez's 4:13.4 time in the mile.

The Wildcat's second runner, Keith Palmer, clocked 4:03.5. Then Don Akin brought KSU from sixth place to second with a 4:01.8 mile. Jeff Schemmel anchored the victory with a 3:59.8 time for an overall 16:18.28 clocking.

That was just 3.7 seconds over the American record and beat the all-time Big Eight best, previously set by K-State (16:21.8) in the Texas Relays.

Ben Plucknett, the Beatrice native who is in his senior season at Missouri, couldn't prevent Jim McGoldrick of Texas from getting a triple in the midlands relay circuit in the discus throw.

Plucknett was under his season best with a 194-3 throw for second behind McGoldrick's 196-6. Nebraska's Steve Millard, a sophomore from North Bellmore, N.Y., had a best throw of 160-11 and didn't place.

Winum Homer Sparks NU Past Kansas, 4-2

By KEN HAMBLETON
Star Sports Writer

Nebraska managed just three hits off Kansas righthander Roger Slagle Friday afternoon at the NU Diamond. But one of those hits was a three-run homer by Larry Winum that proved the difference as the Huskers won 4-2.

NU lefthander Kirk Eymann, who gave up one unearned run in the first and one earned run on three consecutive singles in the second, didn't permit a Jayhawk past second base after the second inning striking out 12 and giving up six hits to keep the Huskers in the contest, and boost his record to 3-2.

KU's Slagle, who hadn't allowed an earned run before last week's loss to Kansas State, was overpowering, striking out seven batters in three innings.

Husker designated hitter Randy Benish drove a single to left field in the second inning and Winum reached first on a walk, but those were the only baserunners allowed until the third inning.

Then in the third, Dick Anderson led off with a walk and after a strikeout, Paul Haas walked bringing first baseman Winum to the plate.

Slagle ran the count to two balls and no strikes, missing with two curve balls and then fired a low fastball which Winum slammed over the right field fence to put the Huskers in the lead 3-2.

"I knew the pitch was coming because he had gotten behind on me," said Winum, a sophomore from Bloomington, Minn. "The pitch was at my knees but it was where I could hit it."

Nebraska added an insurance run in the fourth when Bobby Thomas singled, stole second and went to third on a grounder to first base. Anderson then grounded to the shortstop who bobbled the ball allowing Thomas to score.

In the game, there were 27 strikeouts and only three walks given up by each pitcher.

KU threatened in the sixth when Carl Heinrich reached second on an error and went to third on a ground out at first base. But Eymann struck out the next two batters after running the count full.

The win boosted NU's record to 15-20-1 and evened its Big Eight record at 4-4, while dropping Kansas to 17-11 overall and 4-4 in the conference.

"I knew I had to keep Kansas' runs down because Slagle is such a good pitcher," said Eymann. Slagle, now 5-2, gained his fifth straight win April 2 when he struck out 17 Huskers in a 9-0 win at Lawrence, Kan.

"I tried to throw past everybody in the early innings and kept getting into trouble," said Eymann, a junior from Papillion. "I threw about 160 pitches in nine innings and 75 of those in the first three innings."

"But Jon (catcher Henne) called a good game and we started mixing up the pitches real well," Eymann said. "I started to get tired but my adrenalin started flowing in the late innings and I wanted the decision. I'm glad I went the whole way because we have to start getting ready for the nine-inning Big Eight baseball tournament games in two weeks."

The Huskers will host Kansas in a Saturday doubleheader at 1 p.m.

Huskers Please Osborne

By DAVE SITTLER

Heading into Saturday afternoon's scrimmage, Nebraska football coach Tom Osborne admits he's pleased.

"Overall, I think it's been a good spring," Osborne said Friday afternoon of the spring drill that started on March 31 and will conclude next Saturday with the annual Red-White game. "We've probably put in more offense and defense than in any past spring," Osborne continued after sending his charges through a two-hour drill. "And the players' attitudes have been good all spring."

Osborne has set this afternoon's scrimmage for 1:15 p.m. at Memorial Stadium. The Husker head man indicated he will open the practice with 20 minutes of punt return work.

With the player figured to be the No. 1 punt returner next fall, Bobby Thomas, concentrating on baseball this spring, Osborne plans to take a close look at several other possible candidates for the return duties.

Those figuring to get the most action returning kicks against live coverage today will be Ted Harvey, Dave Butterfield, Kenny Brown and Rene Anderson.

"We'll also be checking some young players who like to get down and cover punts," Osborne said. "We don't like to work too much on punt returns because of the risk of injury, but we'll have to spend some time on it today."

The Cornhusker coach said the scrimmage would follow the normal pattern of each player seeing action in three, 10-minute segments.

Under this system, Osborne said, "no one plays more than 30 minutes and some less than that because of alternates."

Middle guard will continue to receive special scrutinizing, according to Osborne.

Jeff Pullen, who has been running with the No. 1 Black Shirt defensive unit, has returned after nursing an injury. Freshman Rod Horn also has returned.

"Middle guard is still muddled," Osborne said. "Oudious Lee (freshman from Omaha South) has looked good in practice. It's still not a clear-cut position."

Only five or six players are expected to miss the scrimmage because of injuries. The most serious injured is Budge Porter, who remains hospitalized after suffering a severe neck injury in Wednesday's practice.

Nebraska trainer George Sullivan said Porter continues to show improvement but indicated that the Nebraska City sophomore still faces a long road to complete recovery.

Subs Aid Celtic Victory

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics, playing without injured superstar John Havlicek, got tremendous performances from reserves Don Nelson and Steve Kuberski in defeating the Buffalo Braves 101-96 Friday night for a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven National Basketball Association playoff.

Nelson, winding up a 14-year pro career, scored 22 points and Kuberski 12 while spelling Havlicek, helping the Celtics offset a 40-point performance by Buffalo's Bob McAdoo.

Nelson hit for 12 points as Boston took a 28-24 lead in the first period, then finished the game by cashing four crucial free throws in the final 18 seconds as the Celtics held on to make it two straight in their Eastern Conference semifinal series with Buffalo.

Kuberski, giving Nelson a rest, hit on four key baskets at the start of the fourth period, helping the Celtics hang on to a lead which dwindled from 13 points to as few as two midway through the final quarter.

Buffalo closed to within 86-84 in the sixth minute of the fourth period, but the Celtics eased the pressure on a free throw by Dave Cowens and a jump shot by Kuberski. After that, the Braves were not able to get any closer than three points.

Cowens, going the route, led the Celtics with 27 points and 18 rebounds. Jo Jo White had 20 points, and backcourt partner Charlie Scott 14.

McAdoo, held to 16 points in the series opener, came back strong in the second game. He hit for 17 field goals and six free throws, but the one-mangang performance fell short.

Jim McMillan had 18 points, including 12 in the second half, but high-scoring Randy Smith

Islanders Take T-N, Eye Big 10, State Meet

By CHUCK SINCLAIR
Prep Sports Writer

By the time the girls state track meet rolls around, Grand Island coach Dave Vondra's Islanders will have had the opportunity to compete against virtually all of the Class A title contenders.

And if the results of Friday's Trans-Nebraska Conference meet are any indication of what's to follow, Vondra's Islanders will also have beaten all the contenders.

The defending Class A state champions made the conference meet look like a cakewalk enroute to a 36 point win over runnerup Lincoln East at Stuart Stadium.

But Vondra is quick to point out that the results of the GI Invitational, Fremont Invite and Trans-Nebraska aren't enough to label the Islanders a sure bet for the May 14-15 state meet in North Platte.

"Sure, we had the chance to see some Metro schools at Fremont, and Omaha Central at our invitational," he said. "But it's hard to say how it will all come out. As a team in each of the meets we've run in, we've done a tremendous job. But when you throw everyone in the same meet, you just don't know how it will go."

Vondra was referring to the fact that Grand Island picked up just four first places in the Trans meet, but five seconds that helped immensely.

"You just don't know how those seconds will hold up in state competition," he added. "They might not even score when you get a complete field."

That's unlikely, as two seconds came from sprinter Liz Lee, finisher behind defending ste champion Cindy Tatum of North Platte in both the 100 and 220, pushing Tatum to record times.

All four of Grand Island's wins (Cindy Vogel, 440; Jodi Frahm, 880 and the 440 and 880 relay) were in record time for the meet.

The 440 and 880 relay times, :50.1 and 1:45.5, were both the best in the state this year, while Vogel's 440 time ranks her second on that list.

Tatum's 100 time of :10.9 ties her best mark this year while the 220 clocking of :25.4 is the best recorded.

"We knew there were some good individuals at this meet from Lincoln," Vondra said. "But we didn't know how well each school would do because the girls are spread out so well."

The Lincoln coaches aren't even sure how their teams will fare from one week to the next.

In the first meet of the year, Southeast won the Lincoln Relays. Lincoln High won the city championship, but both East and Northeast finished ahead of those two schools in the Trans-Nebraska meet.

A total of seven records were established under a threat of rain that never materialized, but kept conditions muggy.

Lincoln High's Teresa Schoonover was the only Capital City entrant to reach the record book with a 5:37.3 clocking in the mile, a new event.

Schoonover bettered her previous best of 5:41.5, but maintained her fourth position on the track charts.

The full field moves on to stiff competition next week as Grand Island, Hastings and North Platte meet in the Big 10 meet at Norfolk Saturday and the Lincoln teams venture to Ralston

East Overcomes Adversity, Wins City Track Title

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

After three major track titles and two dual victories this spring, it was time for Lincoln East to accept a different challenge — overcoming adversity.

That the Spartans did Friday evening at Stuart Stadium. East achieved the public schools boys championship with five quality performers out of the lineup.

East was minus the services of senior Pat Stout, Kevin Barth, Mike Sneddon and Gale Hamann and junior Jeff Keeler.

Keeler, No. 3 among the state's triple jumpers and a standout long jumper, bruised a heel. Stout and Hamann, a pair of consistent point-producing sprinters, also missed the meet.

Stout has leg muscle cramps and Hamann is still bothered with an ankle injury. Barth, a miler, has a sore throat and Sneddon, a 2-miler, has tonsillitis.

"You bet I was worried — all the way through," East coach Bob Eyth said after the meet in which the Spartans outscored runnerup Northeast by 14 points.

A 1-2-3 East sweep in the 880 two-thirds of the way through the meet allowed the Spartans to overtake the Rockets. Although it remained close thereafter, East never dropped out of the lead.

Spartan depth was obvious. With Stout and Hamann out of the 880 relay, Eyth was forced to use junior weightman Kurt Sorenson and sophomore pole vaulter Todd Hinkle.

Each responded to the challenge, helping East to a 1:32.6 victory to tie the city title. East's previous major meet titles were the Millard Relays, Westside Invitational and Burke Invitational.

"There are a heckuva lot more important meets," Eyth said, "but we have a senior-oriented squad and this meant a lot to them. If we would have lost, it sure would have cut into our goals. We've been pointing to this one."

East's team triumph was the highlight on a day in which no new records were established. Northeast senior hurdler Steve Elker was the only one with a shot at a record.

He skinned the 180 lows in :19.7 and negotiated the 120 highs in :14.4. Both would have been meet records, but excessive wind deprived him of that status.

It created controversy among Northeast backers, since no wind gauge was used in the meet.

"We've been trying to get a wind gauge for two years, but no luck," meet director Phil Sprague said. "Opinion was split whether he should have gotten the high record, but wind was definitely in his favor in the lows."

Northeast athletic director Max Hester, the Rockets' former head track coach, disagreed. "I think Steve should have gotten both records," he said. "How can you disallow them without a gauge? Everything has pretty well gone in the past. Most of the records in this meet have been in adverse conditions."

Lincoln High's John Beaver was a double winner with marks of 54-1/2 in the shot put and 169-10 in the discus. Northeast's Burt Thompson posted an impressive double with a 4:31.8 mile and 9:37.6 two-mile, fastest in state prep circles this spring.

East sophomore Tim McCashland also sparkled with a :50.4 in the quarter. It's the third fastest prep clocking in the state this spring.

Jackson Rejects Contract

Reggie Jackson reportedly has turned down a one-year contract offer from the Baltimore Orioles. Jackson told a Baltimore Sun reporter that his business associate, Gary Walker, was still demanding a multiyear contract from the AL club.

"The Orioles offered a hell of an attractive one-year package," Jackson said. "But Gary still is against that. I felt we were making some progress, but I guess it wasn't enough."

Andersons Boost LHS Netters

By CHUCK SINCLAIR
Prep Sports Writer

If you want to play high school tennis in Lincoln, and play it well, change your name to Anderson.

The name is predominant when you glance through dual results, and with just four weeks of the season remaining, it's a name worth looking for.

Senior Ruth and her sophomore sister Claudia have given Lincoln High a one-two punch that's tough to beat, making coach Mary Lou Gove's Links somewhat of a favorite in Saturday's Lincoln Public Schools championships at Woods Tennis Center.

Somewhat of a favorite is a tag Gove may like better than the outright favorite, even though Lincoln High owns a 5-4 win over the city's other tennis power, Southeast.

"We beat Southeast, but their No. 1 player was in Europe," Gove said of the Knights Mary Pat Brady. "That can make a lot of difference in a match."

"If Mr. Anderson took Ruth and Claudie to Europe, well, just forget it," Gove joked.

Brady has since returned, making Saturday's 9 a.m. start an exciting one.

Both Southeast and Lincoln High have suffered one setback, but the Links loss came to Metro Conference member Omaha Westside.

"In my own personal opinion, Westside may have the best No. 1 girl in the state," Gove said. "She's just a sophomore (Diane Meyers), but she's got a real knack for the game of tennis."

"We lost to them 6-3, but that was early in the season," she said. "And we played a little different format up there."

Although there are dual meets remaining on all the Lincoln teams schedules, they're down to what amounts to the climax of the season with the last four weeks.

"We've got the Lincoln Public schools meet this Saturday, Trans-Nebraska at North Platte next Saturday, the 1-80 meet in Ralston the following week and State the 14th and 15th of May," Gove said. "It just seems like you start to get into the season and it's over."

"That's where the boys have it over the girls," she added. "They play all summer and are peaked for the tournaments in the fall. We just get peaked after starting in the spring and the season's over."

Pius X coach John Riggs agrees that the boys have an advantage. "We battle the weather in the spring and may never reach the peak," he said. "The boys have almost ideal conditions."

Riggs, who assists head coach Vince Aldrich at Pius, has yet another Anderson who's making waves, sophomore Shannon.

"She started out as our No. 4 player and has moved up the ladder to No. 2," Riggs said.

"The only thing she lacks is tournament competition," said Riggs, whose Thunderbolts aren't involved in the city meet with the other Lincoln schools, but play Southeast and East in duals.

"I think by state meet time," he said, "Lincoln schools could make a little noise in Omaha. Lincoln High looks real good right now, and so does Southeast. And East has got some good individuals. Northeast has a young team, but they're making progress."

"That's what should make Saturday's meet all the more interesting," Gove said. "East has a sophomore (Janice Rodenberg) who has already beaten Ruth. It should be a good meet."

Rodenberg, like Anderson, hasn't met Brady yet this season because of the trip to Europe.

But each will meet each other Saturday, barring rain, since the meet is held in round robin format with each school entering a No. 1 and No. 2 singles, and also No. 1 and No. 2 doubles team.

Volleyball Meet On Saturday

The University of Nebraska and the Lincoln Volleyball Club will serve as co-hosts for the 1976 Region VIII U.S.V.B.A. Championships.

The matches are to be held Saturday, from 8:30 a.m. until 10:00 p.m. in both the Coliseum and the Women's Physical Education Building.

A total of thirty-five teams from the states of Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, and Nebraska will compete in the four division championships. Nebraska will be represented in the Men's Open Division, the Women's Open Division, the Men's B Division and the Women's B Division by the co-host Lincoln Volleyball Club. Additional Nebraska teams competing include a Men's B Team from Offutt Air Force Base and a Women's Open Team from R. J. Advertising of Lincoln.

According to John Walton, tournament co-ordinator and coach of the Lincoln Volleyball Club, teams favored to qualify for the National Championships to be held May 18-22 in Schenectady, New York are as follows: Men's Open: Chuck's Steakhouse, Kansas City; Blue Valley Athletics Foot, Independence, Mo.; Graceland College, Lamoni, Ia.; and the St. Louis Volleyball Association, St. Louis, Mo. In the Women's Open: Lincoln Volleyball Club, Lincoln; and Colorado Volleyball Association, (an All-Star team from the state).

The Lincoln Volleyball Club Open Women's Team, consisting predominately of University of Nebraska Varsity Athletes, has compiled a seven of twelve tournament victory record making them Nebraska's strongest hope for a national bid.

In addition to the outstanding caliber of play the day will be enhanced by a high school coaches clinic, along with Olympic and International Officiating.

Guest speakers for the clinic include Rod Schall Men's Volleyball Coach at Graceland College, Bruce Wilde, Region VIII USVBA Commissioner, and Pat Sullivan, Women's Volleyball Coach at the University of Nebraska. Officiating will be provided, in part, by Glen Davise, who has officiated in every Olympic Game since 1964 when Volleyball became a recognized sport and Tom Slaymaker, who has officiated in both the Pan American Games and in the Zone Championships.

The finals of the B Men's and Women's Division will take place at 5:30 p.m. on the Coliseum Stage and the Women's Physical Education Building, respectively. The Women's Open Finals are to be held in the Coliseum at 7:00 p.m. followed by the Men's Open Finals at 8:00 p.m.

Officer's Call Eyes Feature

By MARK GORDON

Grand Island — Will four pounds boost Officer's Call into the winners' circle?

That's the question in Saturday's $15,000-added Gus Fonner Handicap here at Fonner Park as the 40-day Grand Island racing season ends after its most successful season since opening in 1954.

The pride of Mr. and Mrs. Nial Tidball of Westport, S.D., will carry 117 pounds — one pound less than his 118-pound load two weeks ago in the $6,000 Fonner Mile.

Mrs. S. Jo Stumps' Stumpy The Boy, will carry topweight of 125 pounds — three pounds more than his 122-pound package when he sped to a 2½-length verdict in the Fonner Mile.

So despite finishing second to Stumpy in the Fonner Mile with a four-pound spread, Officer's Call will carry eight less pounds — 125-117 — in the Fonner Handicap.

That might be enough to project Officer's Call into the winner's circle of this mile and 70-yard fixture that includes three former Fonner Handicap winners among its six entrants.

Officer's Call won last year's race, defeating Rooter and Stumpy The Boy in a track-record time of 1:42 1-5.

That clocking was one-fifth of a second faster than Stumpy The Boy's 1:42 2-5, which earned him the second division of the 1974 Fonner Handicap over Semi-Phade and Vertical Streak.

The first division winner in 1974 was the Kemling Brothers' Patsy's Reign, who scooted to a 1:43 clocking in defeating Roving Count and Idealine.

Those three former Fonner Handicap winners appear to have the best chance of capturing the top prize for older horses at this spring's Fonner meet.

In terms of class, Stumpy The Boy may have a slight edge. He tallied one second, one third and two fourths in a spring campaign at Oaklawn Park in Hot Springs, Ark. and collected $31,088 last season.

But the long-striding Officer's Call still may be the horse to catch.

Stumpy The Boy will be guided by Fred Ecoffey, while Wayne Anderson will have Officer's Call and apprentice Rob Williams will guide Patsy's Reign under lowweight of 108 pounds.

Conspicuous by his absence is Bold Trap, the top-weighted entrant at 128 pounds, who would have run with Stumpy The Boy as a Don Von Hemel-trained entry. Bold Trap, one of the country's top 4-year-olds, bypassed the Fonner Mile two weeks ago, the Tondi Handicap last Friday and the Fonner Handicap.

Other contestants, their weights and riders include L. Lea Davis' Quiviera (115 and Dan Whited); Ron Cummings' Rosedale Boy (113 and John Rettele) and Lois Naugle's Quilla Sue (110 and Tim Wortman).

NU Hosts Rowing Meet

Nebraska will host the Big Eight rowing championships at Branched Oak Lake on Saturday.

Events will begin at 9 a.m. Three Big Eight schools will compete — NU, Kansas State and Oklahoma State.

Nebraska is the defending champion, winning the Ben Stott Challenge Cup, symbolic of victory last year.

Interested spectators should come to the Inland Shores Marina for best visibility.

If high winds and rough water prevent races on Saturday, the meet will be rescheduled for 6 a.m. Sunday.

Meet timetable:

9 a.m. — Fresh eight; 9:30 — Women's JV eight; 10 — varsity eight; 10:30 — women's varsity eight; 10:45 — varsity four with cox; 11 — singles sculls; 11:15 — fresh four with cox; 11:30 — double sculls; 11:45 — women's varsity four with cox.

Huskers Win

Lawrence, Kan. — A fired-up Nebraska softball team scored four runs the first inning, then held previously undefeated Kansas to three runs Friday to win the opening game of the double-elimination Big Eight tournament.

Jan Bartels pitched the win for the 7-8 Huskers. NU takes on Iowa State at 9:30 a.m. Saturday.

NU Regents To Open Closed Doors

By The Associated Press

James H. Moylan, chairman of the University of Nebraska Board of Regents, has announced that the board will open its "closed sessions" to the news media with the understanding that details will not be reported.

Governmental bodies are allowed under state law to have closed sessions to discuss matters such as personnel, pending litigation and real estate transactions.

The new regents' policy is similar to the policy established by the legislature before it voted several years ago to open its meetings.

"Hopefully, this arrangement will work to everyone's general satisfaction and we welcome your comments," Moylan said in a letter mailed to newsmen Wednesday.

The regents were one of the major targets of the current open meetings law which was passed by the legislature last year.

After the law went into effect, Lancaster County Atty. Ron Lahners said the regents were once in violation of the statute, but he declined to prosecute because he said the regents were unaware they were breaking the law.

Since that time, the regents have followed the open meetings law's guidelines for holding closed sessions.

The next regents meeting is scheduled for 8 a.m. May 14 in Omaha.

Moylan did add some qualifications. "There will probably be some instances when subjects such as extremely sensitive personnel matters are to be discussed," he said. "At such times the board may wish to meet without the presence of the media. You will certainly be advised when those situations exist."

Seven Firemen Treated For Smoke Inhalation

Omaha (AP) — Seven firefighters were treated for smoke inhalation Thursday after rescuing a mother and her 19-month-old son from a burning second-story bedroom.

Mrs. Diane Brazil, 24, and her son Eugene were treated for smoke inhalation and released.

Six of the firefighters were treated and released. Capt.

Joseph Kurtz, 39, was listed in good condition at an Omaha hospital. None wore oxygen masks.

Firefighters entered the house to rescue Mrs. Brazil after handing the unconscious baby to firefighters outside a window.

Chief Fire Investigator Vernon Trapp said the fire started as the result of three youngsters playing with matches on the porch.

Some Are Too Poor To Buy Food Stamps

By JANE BRYANT QUINN
New York — One of the reasons President Ford gave for cutting the food-stamp population by 5.3 million persons (and saving $1.2 billion) this June 1 is that he wanted to concentrate the remaining money on people who really need it. But in fact he's paying no attention to those who need it most — namely, those who are so poor they can't even afford to buy the stamps.

Jane Bryant Quinn

The way the program works is that eligible people have to buy stamps from an approved vendor. They then turn them in at a grocery store for food worth more than they paid for the stamps. However a recipient must purchase at least one-fourth of his month's allotment at once, so if he's charged $88 a month for food stamps, his minimum purchase is $17.

That may not sound like a lot of money to you, but the truly poverty stricken have great difficulty scraping that much together. They exist entirely on a day-to-day basis. Unable to get $17 in hand all at once they become literally too poor to buy food stamps. Some families can afford stamps for half the month, but then the rent falls due or the electric bill, and they have to scrimp through the rest of the month of dried bread.

A solution would be to eliminate the requirement that food stamps be paid for. Instead, let people use their money to buy food directly, and supplement that with a small stamp allotment.

This would let the poorest of the poor into the program — the very people the President says he's trying hard to reach. But the effect of including them is to expand the program — and since the primary objective is to save money this proposal has been muted. The Senate also cut it out of its food-stamp bill, although the idea is still alive in the House.

Besides walling the poorest out of the program the purchase requirement also provides a handle for graft. People buy food stamps at banks, credit unions, post offices, check-cashing outlets and other approved vendors. Some vendors steal the money. Others hoard it in their bank accounts earning interest on money that really belongs to the government.

In a recent investigation, the Agriculture Department found $6.4 million unaccounted for, and $18.4 million illegally hoarded. Their solution try to tighten up the reporting system. But an even better solution would be to eliminate the temptation to steal by ending the process of paying for stamps.

After June 1 food-stamp recipients who earn close to the poverty line will probably find their allotments cut. Those with little income and one to two-person families, will probably find them increased. And families over the official poverty line will be cut out of the program entirely. In my last column I covered some of the changes in detail. Here are more.

At present the average food-stamp recipient pays 24%

of his net income for stamps, with the maximum not to exceed 30%. After June 1 everyone will pay 30%. Because of certain new rules on deductions, some recipients will find themselves ahead despite this provision. But for many others, it means a big increase in the price they pay for food.

The sight of college kids cashing food stamps, when their parents probably could afford to support them has made some people especially mad. The Agriculture Department isn't exactly sure what to do about this. Their proposed regulation prevents minors from collecting stamps if their families are not also eligible. However, due to the fact that many states have lowered the age of majority to 18, many students who are otherwise ineligible would still be able to stay in the program.

The new rules require recipients to look actively for work, rather than simply register with federal and state employment agencies. They will have to bring signed statements that they indeed went on job interviews.

All recipients will have to report monthly on their financial situation, at present, reporting is required only if their situation changes. This is supposed to save money by curbing cheating, and perhaps it will. It will also generate some expensive paperwork.

Despite the fact that they've raised the cost of food to many of the poor, the Agriculture Department has taken no steps to make that money stretch any further. They're just paying more for the inadequate diet they have already.

Stock Traders Turn Bearish; Prices Drop

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock traders turned bearish on talk of higher interest rates Friday and prices tumbled widely in a sluggish session. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks declined an even seven points to 1,000.71, and nearly twice as many New York Stock Exchange issues lost ground as gained.

Volume on the Big Board slacked off to 17 million shares, compared with Thursday's 20.22 million. After the close Thursday, the Federal Reserve reported that the nation's money supply jumped for the third straight week, putting its rate of growth for the past month above the Fed's long-range target rate.

"That money supply sent some short-term interest rates up," said analyst Eldon Grimm of Burr, Wilson & Co. "That weighed on the market a bit." "And there might have been a little disappointment this morning when Citibank could have cut its prime rate and didn't."

The market made a brief attempt at a comeback midway through the session, with the Dow recovering about three of the nearly six points it lost in the first half hour.

But the upswing failed to gather any support and prices resumed their slide. Texas Utilities was the most active Big Board issue, dropping a fraction in price. A block of 180,000 shares was traded.

—Staying Ahead—

Some Are Too Poor To Buy Food Stamps

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

New York — One of the reasons President Ford gave for cutting the food-stamp population by 5.3 million persons (and saving $1.2 billion) this June 1 is that he wanted to concentrate the remaining money on people who really need it. But, in fact, he's paying no attention to those who need it most — namely, those who are so poor they can't even afford to buy the stamps.

The way the program works is that eligible people have to buy stamps from an approved vendor. They then turn them in at a grocery store for food worth more than they paid for the stamps. However, a recipient must purchase at least one-fourth of his month's allotment at once, so if he's charged $68 a month for food stamps, his minimum purchase is $17.

That may not sound like a lot of money to you, but the truly poverty stricken have great difficulty scraping that much together. They exist entirely on a day-to-day basis. Unable to get $17 in hand all at once, they become literally too poor to buy food stamps. Some families can afford stamps for half the month, but then the rent falls due, or the electric bill, and they have to scrimp through the rest of the month of fried bread.

A solution would be to eliminate the requirement that food stamps be paid for. Instead, let people use their money to buy food directly, and supplement that with a small stamp allotment.

This would let the poorest of the poor into the program — the very people the President says he's trying hard to reach. But the effect of including them is to expand the program — and since the primary objective is to save money, this proposal has been killed. The Senate also cut it out of its food-stamp bill, although the idea is still alive in the House.

Besides walling the poorest out of the program, the purchase requirement also provides a handle for graft. People buy food stamps at banks, credit unions, post offices, check-cashing outlets and other approved vendors. Some vendors steal the money. Others hoard it in their bank accounts, earning interest on money that really belongs to the government.

In a recent investigation, the Agriculture Department found $6.4 million unaccounted for, and $18.4 million illegally hoarded. Their solution: try to tighten up the reporting system. But an even better solution would be to eliminate the temptation to steal by ending the process of paying for stamps.

After June 1, food-stamp recipients who earn close to the poverty line will probably find their allotments cut. Those with little income, and one to two-person families, will probably find them increased. And families over the official poverty line will be cut out of the program entirely. In my last column I covered some of the changes in detail. Here are more:

— At present, the average food-stamp recipient pays 24%

of his net income for stamps, with the maximum not to exceed 30%. After June 1, everyone will pay 30%. Because of certain new rules on deductions, some recipients will find themselves ahead despite this provision. But for many others, it means a big increase in the price they pay for food.

— The sight of college kids cashing food stamps, when their parents probably could afford to support them, has made some people especially mad. The Agriculture Department isn't exactly sure what to do about this. Their proposed regulation prevents minors from collecting stamps if their families are not also eligible. However, due to the fact that many states have lowered the age of majority to 18, many students who are otherwise ineligible would still be able to stay in the program.

— The new rules require recipients to look actively for work, rather than simply register with federal and state employment agencies. They will have to bring signed statements that they indeed went on job interviews.

— All recipients will have to report monthly on their financial situation; at present, reporting is required only if their situation changes. This is supposed to save money by curbing cheating, and perhaps it will. It will also generate some expensive paperwork.

— Despite the fact that they've raised the cost of food to many of the poor, the Agriculture Department has taken no steps to make that money stretch any further. They're just paying more for the inadequate diet they have already.

Stock Traders Turn Bearish; Prices Drop

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock traders turned bearish on talk of higher interest rates Friday and prices tumbled widely in a sluggish session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks declined an even seven points to 1,000.71, and nearly twice as many New York Stock Exchange issues lost ground as gained.

Volume on the Big Board slacked off to 17 million shares, compared with Thursday's 20.22 million.

After the close Thursday, the Federal Reserve reported that the nation's money supply jumped for the third straight week, putting its rate of growth for the past month above the Fed's long-range target rate.

"That money supply sent some short-term interest rates up," said analyst Eldon Grimm of Birr, Wilson & Co. "That weighed on the market a bit."

"And there might have been a little disappointment this morning when Citibank could have cut its prime rate and didn't."

The market made a brief attempt at a comeback midway through the session, with the Dow recovering about three of the nearly six points it lost in the first half hour.

But the upswing failed to gather any support and prices resumed their slide.
